

Thamar Fedestin

Co-Owner, Creatives of Color Boston

Thamar “Tammi” Jean Fedestin is a Boston-born arts administrator and artist with over a decade of experience in the non-profit sector. Tammi is a queer Haitian woman with a fascination for all things nerdy and creepily cute. She currently holds a BA in Arts Management from the Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts in North Adams, MA. Tammi has worked in a variety of settings, which allowed her to grow her skills as an administrator, graphic designer, and, sometimes, emergency seamstress. Her favorite thing in the world is to see someone being their most authentic selves. Seeing people embracing all aspects of themselves brings Tammi immense joy. Currently, she helps run an art collective called Creatives of Color Boston and offers administrative support to the dance company, Jean Appolon Expressions. She also runs a virtual art gallery on her website, Cosmic Zo.

Leadership Superpower: Public speaking and navigating an audience is something I’m very comfortable with. In the past, I have been called upon to be an MC and create the flow for an event. Creative problem-solving is also a skill I like to utilize when possible. I like to look at a problem from all angles use my past experiences and the assets of the team to solve the problem.

What brings her joy: Seeing people, especially BIPOC folks, embracing all aspects of themselves
