Dedicated to the Memory of Myra Kraft

This 2011 annual report is dedicated to the memory of Myra Kraft, beloved and valued member of the Boston Foundation’s Board of Directors.

Her wisdom and spirit helped to guide the Boston Foundation during her lifetime and will inspire all of its work going forward.
Letter from the Chair

As Chair of the Board of Directors of the Boston Foundation, I am privileged to have a special lens through which I can view its work and accomplishments. Every year, I am deeply impressed, and this year was no exception. You will learn about the progress the Foundation made toward meeting every one of its goals reflected in these pages. None of this would be possible without the support of two important groups to which we owe a debt of gratitude.

First, thank you to our donors, both for making grants through your Donor Advised Funds and for contributing to other funds at the Foundation. Many of you gave to the Civic Leadership Fund, which raised $1.4 million this year, and which supports much of the Foundation’s work in critical areas, such as advancing education and health care reform. I thank everyone who helped to build that important fund.

This annual report pays tribute to a very special group of donors who have made planned and legacy gifts over the years to the Permanent Fund for Boston. This is the fund that gives the Foundation the resources it needs for all of its grantmaking in Greater Boston and a great deal of its other work strengthening our community. Over the years, hundreds of people have helped to build that fund and many others have indicated that they will leave bequests to it as part of their estate planning. As we advance toward the Foundation’s 100th Anniversary in 2015, we are making a special commitment to building this fund so that it can be even stronger in the future.

I also want to thank the staff of the Boston Foundation, which includes some of the most talented and dedicated people working in the philanthropic and nonprofit realm in our city. In hundreds of large and small ways, and under the expert direction of Paul Grogan, they improve our community immeasurably.

Finally, I want to express my appreciation to my fellow Directors, who make enormous contributions to all of the Foundation’s work. This year, we suffered a terrible loss—one that we share with many others. With the passing of Myra Kraft, the Boston Foundation lost a dedicated Director and a cherished friend—and our community lost a champion for the most vulnerable people among us.

We take great solace, however, in knowing that Myra’s compassion and work will live on through the many organizations she served and inspired, including the Boston Foundation. Myra was the impetus behind a partnership the Boston Foundation helped to launch, called the Boston Opportunity Agenda, which this year released its first report card on the progress it is making to prepare all Bostonians to thrive. That effort stands as a tribute to Myra’s leadership and optimism.

In that spirit, I invite you to join us as we move into the next year and continue to strive to fulfill our mission to ensure that all of our residents are successful and thriving, and all of our communities are vibrant, safe and affordable. Let’s do that as a way of honoring the memory of Myra Kraft and with much hope for our future.

Michael B. Keating, Esq.
Chair, Board of Directors
A young immigrant from Cape Verde attending a local community college receives coaching and support through a major college completion initiative. A mother of four pursues her dream of becoming a nurse through a program that helps adults prepare for jobs in the health care field. A young man from the streets of Roxbury is connected with trusted adult mentors and placed in a life-altering job.

These are just a few of the lives that have been changed by programs supported through the Permanent Fund for Boston at the Boston Foundation.

Among all of the generous donors who conduct their giving through the Boston Foundation—and contribute to funds held by the Foundation—there is a unique group of people who decide they want to have a profound impact on Greater Boston's future and who choose to do that by including the Permanent Fund for Boston in their estate plans.

Over the years, it is this fund that has given the Foundation the resources to invest in bold new ideas: ideas like establishing the first public television station in the country; or starting a brand new youth service corps that would go on to serve as a national model; or the audacious idea that Boston’s Harbor could go from being one of the filthiest to one of the cleanest urban harbors in the country.

It is this same fund that gives the Foundation the resources to join in partnership with other funders and with government to create ambitious new initiatives aimed at solving Greater Boston’s most serious challenges—and to make grants to innovative nonprofit organizations with proven track records of success. And it is this fund that will be there in the future, so that tomorrow’s Boston Foundation can respond nimbly to the challenges and new ideas of the day.

In this year’s annual report, we tell the stories of just a few of the donors who have left bequests to the Permanent Fund for Boston—or have inspired others to create funds in their name. One story is about the very first donor who left a major bequest that allowed the new foundation to start making grants in the early part of the 20th century. Another is about a world-renowned social worker who left a fund with just one restriction—that it be used for “community building.”

We join their stories with those of people whose lives have been changed because of their generosity and commitment to Greater Boston.

As the Boston Foundation approaches its 100th Anniversary, in 2015, we are making a commitment to continue to build this important fund—this community endowment—so that future residents of Greater Boston can pursue their dreams too. We invite you to join us.

Our Mission

As Greater Boston’s community foundation since 1915, the Boston Foundation devotes its resources to building and sustaining a vital, prosperous city and region, where justice and opportunity are extended to everyone.

It fulfills this mission in three principal ways:

1. Making grants to nonprofit organizations and designing special funding initiatives to address the community’s critical challenges;

2. Working in partnership with our donors and other funders to achieve high-impact philanthropy; and

3. Serving as a civic hub and center of information, where ideas are shared, levers for change are identified, and common agendas for the future are developed.

Our Value Statement
In everything we do, we seek to broaden participation, foster collaboration and heal racial, ethnic and community divisions.

Our Strategic Focus on People and Place
All of the work of the Boston Foundation is guided by two main strategic goals that reflect our deep commitment to strengthening our communities:

- Greater Boston residents are successful and thriving.
- Greater Boston communities are vibrant, safe and affordable.

Through these goals, we seek to have a profound impact on important areas of community life—including dramatic improvements in education and health attainment; safe and vibrant neighborhoods; robust arts and cultural opportunities; and a regional economy that enables everyone to thrive.

Our Governance and Staff
The Foundation is overseen by a distinguished Board of Directors, selected to represent the broad diversity of our community’s interests and needs, and some 70 staff members who work closely with donors, grantees, civic leaders and community residents to have a positive impact on Greater Boston and our region. The staff includes professionals in the areas of grantmaking, philanthropy, finance, administration and communications and public affairs.

(See page 6 for a list of all board members and page 8 for a staff list.)
Understanding the Boston Foundation

Major Funder of Nonprofit Organizations / Our Grantmaking in Greater Boston

Through our competitive grantmaking in Greater Boston, the Boston Foundation supports organizations across a broad range of issues, while being guided by our strategic focus on people and place.

This grantmaking is made possible through the generous support of numerous donors who have contributed to the Permanent Fund for Boston, which has been built by hundreds of donors since 1915 to meet the changing needs of our community.

The Boston Foundation offers large, multi-year General Operating Support Grants to nonprofit organizations whose missions are closely aligned with the Foundation’s goals and objectives. We also offer Project Support Grants for specific programs that reflect our goals, Special Opportunity Grants for new ideas that tackle long-standing or emerging community challenges, and other types of grants and support. The Foundation works closely with the nonprofit organizations that receive grants and all of the communities we serve (see Applying for a Grant on page 51 for more).

Enhancing Donor Impact / Customizing Charitable Solutions, One Donor at a Time

The Boston Foundation works closely with our donors—whether they are just beginning their philanthropic journey or possess a high level of clarity and sophistication. We pride ourselves in marrying our donors’ aspirations and passion for giving with our deep understanding of the important issues facing our communities.

Through Donor Advised Funds, our donors make unlimited grants anywhere in the United States or abroad. These funds operate much like a private foundation, without the administrative or payout burdens. As a Donor Advised Fund expert for more than 30 years, the Foundation works closely with our donors to create positive change for the causes they care about.

The Foundation also offers funds that allow donors to invest in the future of Greater Boston and the issues and organizations that have a profound impact on their lives—through gifts or bequests to the Permanent Fund for Boston, Boston’s primary endowment fund, or Field of Interest Funds that benefit a particular issue. In addition, the Foundation has a number of Designated Funds that provide annual support to many of our city’s most important nonprofit organizations. (See Becoming a Donor on page 52 for more.)
More than $26 Million in Funds Leveraged in 2011

As Greater Boston’s community foundation, the Boston Foundation is in a unique position—at the center of this region’s philanthropic and nonprofit sectors—which enables it to leverage millions of dollars in outside resources for the benefit of the city and region. In 2011:

Close to $5 million was received by the Foundation for special initiatives, such as those in the areas of college success, youth mentoring and gang violence prevention, and workforce development.

More than $1 million was raised for international disaster relief funds through the Haiti Fund and the Japanese Disaster Relief Fund, which are housed at the Boston Foundation.

More than $1.4 million was raised for SkillWorks from private and public sources to address critical issues of the region’s workforce development system toward the overall goal of $10 million over five years.

Some $6.7 million was generated by collaboratives housed at the Foundation, including $4 million for the Boston Opportunity Agenda; $1,105,000 for English for New Bostonians; $450,500 for the Boston Schoolyard Initiative; $979,000 for the Achieving the Dream higher education funder collaborative; and $180,000 for Social Venture Partners-Boston.

More than $2.6 million in co-funding came from Boston Foundation donors to strengthen the impact of the Foundation’s initiatives.

More than $10.3 million in Donor Advised Fund grants were directed to organizations supported by Discretionary Funds during 2011.

More than $2 million was raised for the StreetSafe Boston initiative to address the troubling youth gang violence issues in our city.

Program Related Investments Have Leveraged $500 Million

In 2002, the Boston Foundation’s Board set aside $10 million from the principal of the Permanent Fund for Boston for Program Related Investments (PRIs). Investments to date include $6.5 million in PRI loans for producing housing for the homeless and stabilizing foreclosed properties in distressed neighborhoods, and $5.5 million in loan guarantees for charter school construction and affordable housing project operating reserves. These investments, made in partnership with other funders, have helped finance more than 3,200 units of housing and 20 charter schools and leveraged some $500 million in additional financing.

Civic Leader and Convener / Changing the Conditions That Challenge Our Region

Over the last decade, the Boston Foundation has become a major civic leader for Greater Boston and our region—with crucial support from the Civic Leadership Fund at the Boston Foundation, which raised more than $1.4 million this year. We conduct this work through a formula that includes:

- Cutting Edge Research
- Major Forums and Convenings
- Strategic, Proactive Grantmaking
- Task Forces and Coalitions
- Communications and Media
- Deep Public Policy Work

Through our Understanding Boston series, we identify challenges facing our city and region, commission fresh research and share information through a series of forums that are attended by thousands of people every year. The Foundation also is known for using strategic, proactive grantmaking to strengthen its civic leadership work and forming powerful task forces and coalitions of experts dedicated to fulfilling ambitious agendas for change. Through all of these strategies, including working closely with the media to encourage in-depth coverage of key issues, we engage in deep public policy work in partnership with other civic leaders and policy makers. Over the years, our civic leadership has had a profound impact on public education, smart growth housing, fiscal issues for municipalities, health and wellness—and other areas of critical importance to the people of our city and region.

The Foundation also sponsors the Boston Indicators Project, which provides a comprehensive, constantly-updated body of information about every aspect of life in Greater Boston through bold, groundbreaking reports and an award-winning state-of-the-art website at www.bostonindicators.org.
The Boston Foundation was founded in 1915 with a simple, but profound mission—to receive gifts from generous donors and use those resources to make grants to the nonprofit organizations that serve the Greater Boston community.

Most community foundations in America received relatively minor contributions in their early days and it took years for them to have the capacity to make any grants. In 1916, however, a civic-minded Bostonian named James Longley left a bequest of $4 million to the Boston Foundation. It was, and would remain for many years, by far the largest gift given to any community foundation in the country—and it made the Boston Foundation the first to have the capacity to make substantial grants to benefit the community.

What was especially powerful about Mr. Longley’s particular bequest was that it was left to the Foundation’s Permanent Fund for Boston—and it placed no restrictions on the way his gift would be spent. It allowed the Foundation to respond immediately to Boston’s greatest needs, which at the time included the settlement houses that were serving European immigrants and the hospitals and agencies responding to those affected by World War I.

It is impossible to calculate the value of Mr. Longley’s bequest today—especially the number of lives he has touched through his generosity. Hundreds of other donors have followed in his footsteps.

This year’s annual report pays tribute to just a few of those donors and tells stories of some of the lives that have been changed as a result of their gifts. It draws a human connection between the people of the past who entrusted their contributions to the Boston Foundation and those who are benefiting from their generosity today.

Back in 1915, James Longley was an influential businessman who had a high regard for the people living in his community and wanted them to thrive in the years to come. Today, almost 100 years later, he is living on through his contribution to the Permanent Fund for Boston—and, as a result, he and other donors like him are literally changing lives.
“We Can Do This Together”

“It changed my life.” This is what Elisio Depina says about Success Boston, a college completion initiative that helps Boston Public Schools students get ready, get in and get through college. With a case management approach, the initiative provides students with one-on-one coaching, help with applications and financial aid and any other assistance they might need.

“The first thing Elisio needed was a new green card,” says Elisio’s Success Boston coach Danny Rivera, who works with students at Bunker Hill Community College. “He had lost his card and they were telling him it would take months to get a new one. So I got right on it and he had the card in time to start his first day of college.”

“Danny told me ’we can do this together,’” says Elisio, “and we did. The next thing he did was help me apply for financial aid. I couldn’t sleep at night because I was so worried about money. If it weren’t for Danny and Success Boston, I wouldn’t be where I am right now.”

Elisio, who is now a U.S. citizen, came to Boston from Cape Verde when he was 16, just seven years ago, with his father, two brothers and a sister. He worked such long hours at a McDonald’s to make ends meet that he fell behind in his homework, fell asleep in classes, and eventually dropped out of high school.

“I could have gone on working for McDonald’s,” he says, “but I kept on thinking that I wanted more out of life. I kept asking myself who I wanted to be. So I went back to Madison Park High School and passed all of my courses and graduated. I knew I wanted to go to college, but I’ve always had financial problems and I didn’t know how to start. Then I got a call from Danny, who said ’I’m here to help you,’ and that’s when my life began to change.”

Today, Elisio, who Danny says is like “a force of nature,” mentors other Bunker Hill students and is attending his first year at New Haven University where he is studying Investigative Services. He and Danny made sure that his credits from Bunker Hill would count toward a Bachelor’s degree at a four-year college, so he expects to graduate in two years. His face lights up when he mentions Edna, his fiancé, who is also from Cape Verde and attends Bridgewater State University.

“She inspires and motivates me,” he says. “We both believe that if you want to do something, you have to understand what it takes and you have to do that no matter what. That’s the only way to succeed in life.”

Danny Rivera with Elisio Depina
James Longley

Born in Boston's West End in 1840, James Longley became a director of major financial institutions in Boston and Chicago and the owner of some of the largest textile mills in New England.

As someone who cared deeply about the city in which he was born and was active in numerous charities, he approved of the new Boston Foundation, which had been launched in 1915 to help those who most needed assistance in our community. At the time, that included European immigrants flooding into the city, as well as families suffering from the effects of World War I.

Known for his concern for others and his many contributions to charities, when he died, in 1916, he left the first large bequest to the Permanent Fund for Boston at the Boston Foundation. His gift was unrestricted, giving the Boston Foundation the resources to be the first community foundation in the country to make grants.

Today, almost 100 years later, he is helping Elisio Depina fulfill his dream of a college education.
Success Boston

Elisio Depina is among the first graduates of the Success Boston College Completion Initiative, which was launched in 2008 following the findings of a study conducted by Northeastern University’s Center for Labor Market Studies for the Boston Private Industry Council and the Boston Foundation. The study found that while the Boston Public Schools has one of the highest college enrollment rates of any urban school system in the country, at close to 78 percent, only 35.5 percent of the students who enrolled in college earned an Associate’s or Bachelor’s degree within seven years.

In response, Mayor Thomas M. Menino challenged the city to double the college completion rate for the BPS Class of 2011 and beyond—and was joined by the Boston Public Schools, the Boston Foundation, the Boston Private Industry Council and University of Massachusetts Boston for the launch of Success Boston in November of 2008. The Boston Foundation committed $1 million in funding every year for five years to the initiative.

The goal is to dramatically increase the number of Boston Public Schools graduates completing college by focusing on helping students get ready, get in and get through college. The initiative supports academic programming and college advising activities at the high school level, offers a summer bridge program for students transitioning from high school to college, and works closely with colleges and universities to offer students the support they need to earn a degree and be prepared to enter the workforce.

In May of this year, 38 Boston area colleges and universities endorsed Success Boston.
“Planting a Garden Together”

The inspiration behind the Family Independence Initiative (FII), a national project that came to Boston just two years ago, is this country’s long history of low-income people forging a path to the middle class by turning to informal networks of family and friends. They have pooled resources, asked advice of each other and followed the example of those in their circle who found success. FII has taken this model and helped to catalyze networks of families and friends throughout Greater Boston who are working together to set goals and take control of their lives.

The concept is brilliant in its simplicity—and you can see it in action in a remarkable group of young women, all immigrants from Colombia, who are part of a larger group of seven women who have been meeting for the last year and a half, under the unobtrusive but attentive eye of FII’s Family Liaison Wandy Peguero. On a beautiful September evening in East Boston, the women got together in a room in that neighborhood’s Social Center for one of their networking meetings. They always bring food to their sessions, for sustenance, and arrange for child care so that they can focus entirely on their conversations.

“The first time we met, we didn’t know what to discuss,” said Beatriz Alvarez, who has emerged as a kind of natural leader of the group and takes notes during meetings on a laptop provided by FII. “Wandy wanted us to decide for ourselves what issues we would discuss. One of the women had a credit card problem and so that became our first issue.” The women decided that they wanted to consult an expert on credit cards, so, at their request Wandy helped them find someone to give them a workshop on credit. “It was helpful for all of us,” added Beatriz.

They have not had to worry about finding topics for their meetings ever since. Several of the women in the group want to go to college and are helping each other apply and seek financial aid. Others are interested in starting businesses and nonprofit groups and have been working with the Center for Women and Enterprise to develop business plans.

They contribute to a joint savings account that is used for gifts for children and for events to which all FII participants are invited. As they learn about the resources that are available to them, they are even helping other families, asking businesses to donate school supplies for children who can’t afford them. And a while back they consulted an expert about how to plant a garden so that they could grow fruits and vegetables for their families. The idea of a garden, planted by these wise and resourceful women, is a perfect metaphor for their work together. And their garden is most definitely growing.
Harriett Bartlett

Considered one of the great American pioneers in the field of social work, Harriett Bartlett was born in 1897, the year before the first social work class was offered at Columbia University. Since then social workers have led the way in developing many of the systems and programs that serve people in need.

Harriett received her Bachelor’s degree from Vassar in 1918 and went on to study at the London School of Economics and the University of Chicago. Her deep connection with Greater Boston took root in 1921 when she began serving as a caseworker for Massachusetts General Hospital. Later, she would teach classes in ‘social economy’ at Simmons College. And in 1969, Boston University awarded her an honorary doctorate for her contributions to the field of social work.

When she died in 1987 at the age of 90, she left a major bequest to the Boston Foundation. Her gift was virtually unrestricted, except that she wanted it to be used for “community building.” Grants from her fund are doing exactly that.

Today she is helping newcomers to our city, like these resourceful women, build community.
Family Independence Initiative

With an operating grant of $450,000 over three years, the Boston Foundation has made a major investment in the initiative that brought the women in this story together.

The Family Independence Initiative (FII) was launched in Oakland, California by Maurice Lim Miller, who was challenged by Jerry Brown, then Mayor of Oakland, to create something new to empower low-income families to pull themselves out of poverty. After thinking about his own family and researching the histories of immigrant, migrant and indigenous communities in the U.S. who managed to move from poverty to the middle class, Maurice found a common narrative—people had turned to family and friends, pooled resources and followed the example of those who had begun to succeed.

FII was created with this model in mind and was replicated in San Francisco and Oahu, Hawaii. Within two years, FII families in those cities had increased their income and their savings by 240 percent and accumulated new assets by becoming homeowners and expanding their businesses.

In the spring of 2010, FII came to Boston and identified 35 families in East Boston, Dorchester and Roxbury to work with—focusing on those who appeared to have the potential and the initiative to change their lives. Already these families have embraced the model and are beginning to show the kind of progress that has taken place in other cities.

“Singing as a Catalyst for Social Change”

“Our mission is to use singing as a catalyst for social change—for cultural change,” says 15-year-old Kevin Chan, “and to transform the community’s negative influences into positive ones.” Carlos Pedrero, age 14, agrees. “I know there are a lot of people who definitely want social change, but they either won’t or can’t speak up. I think when they see us—when they see how great we get along, even though we’re very different—it helps to unite people.”

These thoughtful and articulate young men are both members of the Boston Children’s Chorus (called “BCC” by them), which is deeply committed to providing the youth of Greater Boston with the opportunity to experience the transformative power of music. The Chorus has 11 different choirs and Kevin and Carlos are in the Young Men’s Ensemble, which is a special program to meet the unique needs of boys ages 10 to 18 with changing and changed voices. Far beyond their voices, the Chorus clearly is having a profound impact on these young men’s lives.

“BCC has really changed me,” says Carlos, who moved here from Mexico with his mother when he was eight years old. “When I first came here, it felt very different; it was a different culture. But at BCC you just share everything. You share ideas and you laugh a lot—and you’re working very hard together too. With music, you don’t have to understand the words—you feel the feelings.” Carlos begins his first year at Boston Arts Academy this year, a high school for which he had to audition. “Singing helps us feel more confident too,” he adds.

Kevin was born in Allston to Chinese immigrants. He had seen the Boston Children’s Chorus on television on July 4th and auditioned through the West End Boys and Girls Club in his neighborhood. “Ever since I joined, I realize that it’s not just about singing,” he says. “It’s about the wider definition of art and how it affects people. It’s been very important for me that the chorus stands for unity, and that it is helping people find common ground.”

The Boston Children’s Chorus was created by Hubie Jones, one of the greatest social activists and civic leaders in our city’s history. Not a musician by training, his vision for the choir was to build bridges between the people of Boston through music. Meeting Carlos and Kevin leaves no doubt that his dream has been realized—and that these young men will carry the values they are learning through the chorus with them all of their lives.
Anna Faith Jones grew up in the 1930s and ‘40s on the campus of Howard University, where her father, Mordecai Johnson, was President. In 1939, as a little girl, Anna was there when the world-famous contralto Marian Anderson, barred from Constitution Hall, sang before thousands at the Lincoln Memorial. That may have been when she first understood the transformative power of art.

Anna came to Boston to attend Wellesley College and studied music. After college, she tried various professions, but when she began working part time at the Boston Foundation, in 1975, she found her calling. Ten years later, she became the first African-American woman to lead a community foundation. She retired after 16 years, having transformed the Foundation into the region’s dominant grantmaker.

Upon her retirement in 2001, the people of Boston honored her by creating the Anna Faith Jones Arts Fund. Since then the fund has supported many arts groups, including the Boston Children’s Chorus.

Today she is helping Carlos Pedrero and Kevin Chan inspire social change through their music.
In 2001, longtime Boston activist and distinguished community leader, Hubie Jones, witnessed a moving and inspiring performance by the Chicago Children’s Choir, and decided that Boston—the city he loves most—deserved to have its own ambassadors of harmony. The Boston Foundation was there at the beginning, providing $30,000 in start-up funding to fulfill his vision. This year, the Foundation made a $300,000 operating grant to the organization that will help to support its work over the next three years.

Beginning in 2003 with only 20 singers, today the Boston Children’s Chorus serves more than 450 singers from diverse racial, religious, ethnic and economic backgrounds, representing some 80 urban and suburban neighborhoods in Greater Boston. Youth participate after school in 11 different choirs.

Under Artistic Director Anthony Trecek-King, the Boston Children’s Chorus harnesses the power of music to unite our city’s diverse communities and inspire social change. Through intensive choral training, a unique music education curriculum, and unsurpassed performing experiences locally, nationally and around the world, chorus members, ages 7 to 18 learn discipline, develop leadership skills and proudly represent Boston.

This past summer, Kevin Chan and Carlos Pedrero were among 61 members to travel to the United Kingdom, the Chorus’ fourth international tour. The singers presented performances in Scotland and England, including a concert in aid of the international children's charity Save the Children. It is possible that the Boston Children’s Chorus has surpassed even Hubie Jones’ wildest dreams.

One day, Ingrid Trench had a doctor’s appointment at The Dimock Center, which provides families in Boston’s inner-city neighborhoods with health care and much more. In fact, the Dimock is considered to be a national model for delivering comprehensive health and human services in an urban community.

During her appointment, Ingrid mentioned to her doctor that she recently had lost her job in retail. “Like so many Americans, I found myself out of a job for the first time in my life and I realized that I needed help,” she says. “I needed to tap into community resources to get my kids and myself through this.”

Unexpectedly, her doctor turned out to be an immediate link to those community resources. “My doctor said, ‘We have some students here who can help with that. Let me connect you with them.’” The “students” Ingrid’s doctor was referring her to were with Health Leads, which was founded in Boston by Rebecca Onie and Dr. Barry Zuckerman, the legendary head of pediatrics at Boston Medical Center. As a pre-law sophomore at Harvard, Rebecca had been volunteering in pediatrics and saw a direct link between ‘health’ and many of the other problems families had.

Now a national organization, Health Leads is part of a larger movement that is offering a new vision for health care in America. Its programming focuses on promoting health by connecting people to the resources they need to survive and even thrive. Through Health Leads, doctors can “prescribe” food, housing or other critical resources, just as they would medication. Patients take their prescriptions to the organization’s college volunteers, who connect them to those resources.

“The first student I worked with was named Shira,” says Ingrid, “and she helped me with a little bit of everything—connections to nutritious food, child care, summer camps for my kids. She filled that gap between me and the resources my family needed. I’m a proactive person, so between the two of us, there was never a down moment. She was patient and wonderful, and called every Friday to see if I needed anything! It was a difficult period in my life and Health Leads made it a lot easier for me.”

Ingrid was so impressed with Health Leads that she is inspired to switch careers to the human services. “To keep myself busy, I started mentoring kids through Goodwill’s ‘Good Guides’ program and I took a human services class,” she explains. “I found I really loved it. Now, my goal is to get a degree from UMass Boston and prepare to serve my community.” Today, Ingrid still uses Health Leads’ referral services, but she is taking charge of her own life. “I’m embracing my future and moving forward,” she says.

Born in Pittsfield, Massachusetts in 1849, as Anna Clapp, Anna C. Frothingham married Reverend Paul Revere Frothingham in 1892. They resided in New Bedford until 1900, when her husband was invited to serve as the pastor of the historic Arlington Street Church in Boston. While her husband was busy with his new role, which included assisting the poor of Boston, Anna was active in a number of organizations that were launched and run by women.

She was a member of the Women’s Municipal League, a group of wealthy women who prided themselves on inviting women of all incomes to join them as equal members. She also volunteered for the Women’s Educational and Industrial Union, which had been founded in 1877 to respond to the exploitation and miserable labor conditions experienced by many of Boston’s women. When Anna died, in 1939 at the age of 90, she left a major bequest to the Permanent Fund for Boston.

Today she is helping Ingrid Trench build a healthy life for herself and her children.
Health Leads

Health Leads is the organization that is helping Ingrid Trench tap into community resources to keep her family vibrant and healthy during a difficult time. The Boston Foundation has been a major supporter of Health Leads for years, providing more than $600,000 to the organization since 2005. Through its strategic grantmaking and through the Healthy People/Health Economy Coalition, the Foundation is focusing on reducing preventable chronic disease by emphasizing access to healthy food, increased physical activity and other factors that promote health and wellness.

Health Leads was launched at Boston Medical Center’s Pediatric Clinic and has expanded to four other Boston clinics, including The Dimock Center and Codman Square Health Center, and five other cities. Through its approach, doctors can prescribe community resources—just as they would medication.

Patients take their prescriptions to the clinic waiting room, where college volunteers are ready to connect them to these resources. Playing this role has been a transformative experience for hundreds of volunteers from Boston area colleges, who stay with clients until their needs are met. With more than 800 volunteers nationally and 150 in Boston, Health Leads is producing a pipeline of new leaders in health who will have both the conviction and the ability to revolutionize health care.

Health Leads’ ultimate goal is that one day, all doctors will be able to prescribe solutions that improve health, not just manage disease—and that the diagnosis and treatment of non-medical, but health-critical conditions will be a standard part of patient care.

“Lessons You Can Use in All Parts of Your Life”

It is hard to think of a sport at which 15-year-old Alex Maghsoudi does not excel. During the summer, he has played baseball with the Senior Division of the East Boston Baseball Little League, which last year advanced all the way to the state championships. The high school he attends, St. Mary’s in Lynn, wants him to play tennis for the school and has him in training for cross-country track competition, which Alex thinks of as a good way to stay in shape for all of the other sports he plays. He also loves to play basketball, which might just be his favorite sport.

Alex understands how important good nutrition is to staying healthy and active. “I stopped drinking soda,” he says, “and when I’m hungry I snack on fruit or carrot sticks.

On a warm September evening on Noyes Playground in East Boston, Alex considers joining a baseball game in progress, until his mother, Darice, reminds him that he has homework to do. Alex is the youngest of her three sons—and she describes herself as “lucky” that they have all been “good kids,” but one suspects that Darice, a dental hygienist, and her husband Gary, who is a supervisor with the Postal Service, had a little something to do with it.

In 2009, East Boston was chosen to be a pilot site for CHAMPS Boston, a sports-based youth development initiative of the Boston Foundation that focuses on strengthening out-of-school time activities. CHAMPS stands for Coaches Helping Athletes through Mentoring and Positive Sports—and while it distributes donated sports equipment and uniforms, refurbishes fields and invests in youth programs throughout Boston, its primary goal is to train great coaches.

Jimmy Caruso, a member of the East Boston Athletic Board and a seasoned coach himself, says that he gained “tremendous insight” from the program. “East Boston was fortunate to team up with the Boston Foundation,” he explains, “and to be the first neighborhood to have all 165 of our coaches trained.”

Alex says that he thinks East Boston’s coaches, many of whom are fathers of friends, benefited from the training. “I think it teaches them to be more patient,” he says, “to take the time to show us how to do things.” When asked what he gets out of playing sports, he thinks for a moment and then says: “Great friendships with the other players, especially if you play in a championship game together, but playing sports also teaches you to be more mature and disciplined—and those are lessons you can use in all parts of your life.”

Alex hopes to go on to play sports professionally, but short of that, would like to be involved with sports in some way—possibly on the management side of things. If nothing else, he thinks he will most likely be a coach in his spare time.

Juliette Christie Pingree

Juliette Christie Pingree was born in Boston in 1872, the daughter of Sarah White Merrill and Moses Merrill. For 25 years, her father served as the headmaster of Boston Latin School, the oldest school in America. In 1903, Juliette married Arthur Howe Pingree, a minister who had graduated from Boston Latin School and Harvard College. Reverend Pingree became the minister of the First Congregational Church of Norwood, Massachusetts and was widely known for forming one of the first Boy Scout troops in the United States. He and Juliette, who was known for her “can do” attitude and devotion to community, were beloved by their congregation.

Just 12 years into their marriage, in the summer of 1915, Arthur Pingree died while attempting to save two girls from drowning in Gloucester, Massachusetts. Juliette lived for 42 more years. When she died, in 1957 at the age of 85, she left an unrestricted bequest to the Permanent Fund for Boston.

Today she is helping Alex Maghsoudi learn valuable life lessons from his coaches.

Today she is helping Alex Maghsoudi learn valuable life lessons from his coaches.
There are hundreds of volunteer coaches throughout the city of Boston, who spend their spare time devoting themselves to the young people of our city. Alex Maghsoudi’s East Boston coaches—and numerous other coaches—have benefited from a Boston Foundation initiative called CHAMPS Boston, which provides youth development training for them, as well as funds for sports equipment, uniforms, refurbished fields and capacity building activities for youth sports leagues. The initiative reaches out to inner-city teams and organized leagues, including those participating in the sports of baseball, softball, basketball, football and soccer.

The mission of CHAMPS, which stands for Coaches Helping Athletes through Mentoring and Positive Sports, is to ensure that every child in the city has access to high quality athletic opportunities—beyond school hours—including new equipment and safe and clean fields, and that all youth coaches are of the highest quality and understand the fundamentals of youth development through sports. With the ultimate goal of making Boston a national leader in youth sports, the Boston Foundation has committed $2 million over four years to CHAMPS.

During the CHAMPS pilot program in 2009, 600 coaches were trained and 12,000 inner-city youth experienced high quality sports offerings during after-school hours. Since then, an additional 700 coaches have been trained and 10,000 more young people have benefited. And in the summer of 2011, CHAMPS also placed portable bathroom facilities in a number of parks and funded a “healthy food and drink” concession stand in Roxbury’s Jim Rice Field to replace sugary beverages and candy with healthy sports bars, water and fruit.

“Attending college was always a goal for me,” says Karen Furtado, “but when I found out I was pregnant at the age of 18, I had to put my goals on hold.” Karen would go on to have four children, working full-time while raising them, mostly as a single mother. While working and being a mother, she was determined to pass the GED that would some day allow her to go to college, and she accomplished that on her own, studying books at her local library. “They finally let me take the books home with me,” she said, “because I was there every day.” Now that her children are grown, her dreams are no longer on hold. She plans to be a nurse.

One day, a couple of years ago, Karen walked by a bulletin board at Children’s Hospital, where she works in the finance department, and saw a flyer for a Jewish Vocational Service (JVS) program called “Bridges to College.” She had already taken one college prep course, but it hadn’t adequately prepared her to take college entrance exams. “I thought to myself, this is just the break I needed,” she says. “I always tell my kids that if the door of opportunity opens, you should walk through it.” She immediately called JVS to take their assessment test.

Bridges to College prepares adults to bypass remedial courses and enter directly into college-level, credit-bearing coursework. In partnership with Bunker Hill Community College and area employers, including Children’s Hospital, JVS offers reading, English and math classes as well as academic coaching and test preparation. Its focus is on those who are interested in entering the health care field or advancing in a current position they hold in health care.

Karen cannot say enough good things about JVS staff members, who have offices near the complex of buildings that make up Children’s Hospital. “The training and academic coaching played a key factor not only in getting accepted to Bunker Hill,” she explains, “but allowing me to place into credit courses instead of remedial courses. I am currently in my third semester and taking the prerequisites I need for my nursing degree.” She maintains an “A” average, and gives much of the credit to the staff at JVS. “This is the best team anyone could have on her side,” she says. “They are always available for any kind of assistance whether it is finding tutors or giving positive input on homework assignments.”

Karen was nervous when she was asked by JVS to speak at a ceremony this summer for those who have graduated from its classes, but she rose to the occasion. “My children were sitting in the front row,” she says. “It was important to me that they see me moving forward and having goals. I want to lead by example and let them know that they can do anything they want with their lives. It’s never too late to open that door of opportunity and walk through it.”
Edward Glines

Born in 1849 in Somerville, Edward Glines was too young to serve in the Civil War, but when the Spanish-American War broke out, he volunteered and was commissioned a captain by President McKinley.

Edward went on to hold numerous positions in government—first as a Massachusetts Representative, next as a State Senator and finally as the Mayor of Somerville, from 1901 to 1904.

Besides being a public-spirited citizen, Edward was a highly successful businessman, running the Glines Company, which provided supplies to the best hotels in Boston. He also was known as a generous contributor to public and private charities and widely admired. “Few if any men in business in Boston stand higher in the estimation of their associates,” said one newspaper article of the day.

When Edward died in 1938, at the age of 89, he left a major, unrestricted bequest to the Permanent Fund for Boston.

Today he is helping Karen Furtado achieve her dream of becoming a nurse.
Jewish Vocational Service

Jewish Vocational Service (JVS), a nonsectarian nonprofit founded in 1938, is one of Greater Boston’s most effective providers of adult educational and vocational services—offering nearly 20,000 people keys to the future every year. JVS’ Bridges to College, which is helping people like Karen Furtado fulfill their dreams of pursuing health care careers and building better lives for themselves, received a three-year $300,000 grant from the Boston Foundation in 2010—and several other JVS programs are supported through the Foundation’s partnerships.

The Foundation is a major partner in the Boston Opportunity Agenda, and JVS is playing a key role in the Agenda’s new Adult Opportunity Network. The goal of the Network is to dramatically increase the number of Boston adults who are ready for college and a career. The Boston Foundation also founded SkillWorks, a public-private partnership that brings together funders, government, community organizations and employers to address the goal of helping low-income people prepare for well-paying jobs. This year the Foundation made a two-year $800,000 commitment to the initiative.

Through SkillWorks, JVS is the lead agency for the Healthcare Training Institute, which offers a continuum of career advancement services to prepare adults for careers in allied health and nursing with major health care employers in our area. Through all of its programming, JVS is helping thousands of adults, including many immigrants to Boston, achieve their dream of attaining well-paying, family-supporting jobs.

Antwann Johnson was walking down the street in Roxbury with his cousin one day when he noticed a lot of Streetworkers in the area. “I think there was some recent trouble around there, so they were out,” he says. One of the Streetworkers had been a friend of Antwann’s family for years and reached out to him. “I think he saw the hunger in me,” says Antwann. “He said he could put me in a good situation. A few days later he introduced me to Conan Harris.”

Conan Harris is a Program Coordinator for StreetSafe Boston, an initiative of the Boston Foundation that is dedicated to dramatically reducing violence in the city by deploying Streetworkers to connect with underserved youth and then connect them with programs and services. Its slogan is “A Way Out. A Way Up.” And that is exactly what StreetSafe offered Antwann.

“I was never a troublemaker,” says Antwann, “not drug dealing, never stole—but I was hustling, hanging with the wrong people. I was heading for trouble.” Antwann knew he could trust Conan and the rest of the StreetSafe staff.

“They’re from the community,” explains. “That’s the key to everything. You have to have people from the community deal with the community’s issues.”

Conan introduced Antwann to Rodney Dailey, StreetSafe’s Workforce Development Manager, and he helped him get a job at Boston’s Holiday Inn Express, where Antwann is earning the respect of the hotel’s manager, Dennis Callahan, who is so enthusiastic about StreetSafe that he has told managers of other hotels about it. Now Antwann is able to buy things for his two children, a four-year-old daughter and a two year-old son. And he’s starting to think about going to college.

“Conan is like a big brother to me,” he says. “I call him when I’m having a bad day and I call him when I’m having a great day,” he says. “He likes those calls. Some days you just wake up and you think ‘Thank God, I woke up and I’m feeling good’ and I look in the refrigerator and there’s food. A lot of brothers aren’t making it.”

Antwann is eloquent about the heavy load of sadness he carries with him. He lost his “strong, beautiful, humorous” mother to cancer a number of years ago, although he’s proud that she got to see him graduate from high school before she died. And recently he has lost other family members and friends to illness or violence.

“This is one of the toughest summers I’ve ever experienced,” he says. “Illness, tragedy, carnage on the streets. You can’t even go to the park and enjoy family time without worrying that you’ll be dodging bullets. Just walking down the street with your kids, you have to be vigilant. I don’t know when that’s going to change.” What he does know, though, is that as long as he’s got Conan Harris and StreetSafe on his side and “the power of prayer,” he’s not walking down the streets of Boston alone.
David R. Pokross

David R. Pokross is remembered for his work with a prominent Boston law firm and for serving on the boards of Boston’s leading institutions, but these connections were not his birthright. He was born in 1906 in Fall River among people of modest means who worked in the mills. He went on to attend Harvard Law School but, in spite of his magna cum laude record, he encountered a seemingly impenetrable wall of anti-Semitism when he applied to law firms. Finally, he was hired by Peabody & Brown—now Nixon Peabody—where eventually he became a partner.

Over the years, he gave countless hours to Boston’s nonprofits and served on the Boston Foundation’s board for 12 years. In 1997, the Foundation announced the David R. Pokross Fund for Children in Need, which has been contributed to by numerous friends and admirers.

The above photo is of David Pokross and his dear wife Muriel Pokross. Muriel died just this year and we honor her memory.

Today, eight years after his death in 2003, he is helping Antwann Johnson transform his life.
StreetSafe Boston

The Streetworker who first reached out to Antwann Johnson, as well as Rodney Dailey, who helped him get a job, and Conan Harris, who continues to counsel him, are all members of the Boston Foundation’s StreetSafe Boston initiative. StreetSafe is an ambitious, multi-year initiative that takes a unique, holistic approach to preventing youth violence—an approach that is garnering national, even international attention.

It focuses on the most economically disadvantaged areas of Boston, where the vast majority of shootings occur. The goal is to provide young adults with the guidance they need to move away from violence and toward positive alternatives. After a Streetworker makes contact and gains the trust of a young person, StreetSafe’s Program Coordinators connect them with a vast array of services, from housing to health care to education, partnering with service providers that represent some of Boston’s most highly-regarded social, health, education and employment resources.

StreetSafe’s Workforce Development Partnership reaches out to local companies to place young adults in jobs. In the process, it provides opportunities for the business community to have a significant impact on reducing violent crime in the city—an opportunity that Dennis Callahan, Manager of Boston’s Holiday Inn Express, has embraced.

For young adults, jobs mean self-respect, independence, a feeling of being valued and the knowledge that they are contributing to their family’s well-being. When StreetSafe provides young adults, like Antwann, with the skills and the ability to earn a living, it also gives them a sense of hope for the future and the keys to better lives.
The work of the Boston Foundation is guided by two overarching goals that reflect our deep commitment to strengthening the Greater Boston community through grantmaking, civic leadership and enhancing donor impact:

Greater Boston residents are successful and thriving
Greater Boston communities are vibrant, safe and affordable

As we work to meet these goals, we strive to have a profound impact on important areas of community life, including: dramatic improvements in education and health attainment; safe and vibrant neighborhoods; robust arts and cultural participation; and a local and regional economy that enables everyone to thrive.

All of the Tools in the Toolbox

We use all of the tools in our toolbox as we work toward measurable results in areas where we seek to move the needle. These tools include: working closely with our donors to increase the impact of their giving; commissioning and publishing cutting edge research; inviting the community to a series of forums and conversations; convening grassroots and civic leaders to join powerful and diverse task forces and coalitions; informing and working with the media; engaging in deep public policy work; and investing our grantmaking resources in programs and initiatives that are aligned with the results we seek.

Support for all of these activities comes from the Permanent Fund for Boston, which has been built over the years through gifts and bequests from hundreds of generous donors.

On the following pages you will read about just some of our work during 2011—including a brief summary of the strategies we are pursuing, some of the outcomes we hope to see, and highlights of the progress we made this year in partnership with our donors and numerous nonprofit, philanthropic, business and civic organizations.
Goal: Greater Boston residents are successful and thriving

Objective: Improve outcomes for Boston’s residents across the education pipeline

Strategy: Accelerate structural reform and promote autonomies in public schools in Boston

Through this strategy, we seek to double the number of seats in autonomous schools, such as new charter, pilot and innovation schools, in Boston by 2015—and improve student performance along the entire education pipeline. Here are some highlights from 2011:

• The Boston Foundation convened a diverse coalition, called Put Students First, that is working for change in Boston’s schools and calling for a new Boston teachers’ contract to better serve our city’s children.

• We also continued work with the Race to the Top Coalition, which played a key role in passing education reform—and now is monitoring the implementation of reforms, such as a longer school day.

• Among our strategic grants are $100,000 to Unlocking Potential, to open the UP Academy, a Horace Mann, in-district charter school, and $1 million over five years to the NewSchools Venture Fund, to support the replication of high performing charter schools. We have also made major investments in Mass 2020 and its leadership of the Extended Learning Time schools network, and in the efforts of Teach Plus to engage teachers in education reform.

• Three significant reports were released at forums, including The Real Cost of the Contract: An Analysis of Salary and Benefits of Boston Public Schools Teachers, and School Funding Reality: A Bargain Not Kept, about the soaring costs of school employee health care in the state that are eating up all other funds for public schools. We also released the Boston Indicators Project’s second annual Education Report Card online.

Strategy: Increase the 2- and 4-year college graduation rate for low-income students of color and first-generation college students from Boston’s public schools

Striving to increase from 35% to 70% the college completion rate for Boston Public Schools graduates by 2017, the Foundation and its partners made real progress in 2011.

• Our major investment is in the Success Boston College Completion Initiative, a partnership of the City of Boston, the Boston Public Schools, the Boston Foundation, the Boston Private Industry Council, colleges and nonprofits including ACCESS, Freedom House and Hyde Square Task Force. Success Boston graduated its first class of college students this year. The Foundation has committed $1 million annually for this initiative.
Some 38 area universities and colleges came together to support Success Boston this year, and their commitments to the initiative were outlined in the report, Getting Through: Higher Education’s Plan to Increase the College Completion Rates of Boston Public Schools Graduates.

Another report, published by the Foundation, was titled How Students Are Making It: Perspectives on Getting Through College from Recent Graduates of the Boston Public Schools.

Strategy: Promote the career advancement and economic security of low-income individuals

By 2015, our aim is to contribute to a 50% increase in adult students who are achieving their goals for advancement through Adult Basic Education (ABE) and classes in English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL)—as well as a 9% increase in the number of Boston families earning livable wages.

This year the Foundation published two major reports: Breaking the Language Barrier: A Report on English Language Services in Greater Boston, researched by the Commonwealth Corporation, was the first detailed study of ESOL services offered to immigrants in our community; and When Untapped Talent Meets Unmet Need evaluated the Foundation’s successful Allied Health Initiative.

SkillWorks, a public/private partnership co-founded by the Boston Foundation in 2003, received $800,000 over two years from the Foundation to continue its work training thousands of people to participate in Greater Boston’s economy. SkillWorks has invested more than $15 million to help some 3,000 people receive training.

Strategic grants awarded included $450,000 over three years to English for New Bostonians to support ESOL providers in the city, and $225,000 to the Boston Earned Income Tax Credit Action Coalition over three years for an expansion of its Disability Initiative.

The Boston Opportunity Agenda

Spanning All of Our Objectives and Strategies in Education

The Boston Foundation is a co-founder and major funder of the historic Boston Opportunity Agenda, a partnership of the City of Boston, the Boston Public Schools, all of Boston’s major charities and many of its foundations. The agenda is a “cradle to career” effort with ambitious goals across the entire education pipeline. This year the Agenda hired Kristin McSwain as its first Executive Director, launched a new Adult Learning Network and expanded a Summer Learning Project. The Agenda also released its First Annual Report Card this September, showing progress across the entire education pipeline and drawing attention to areas that are not progressing, such as 3rd Grade Reading Proficiency.
Objective: Increase the health and wellness of Greater Boston residents

Strategy: Encourage healthy behaviors among Boston residents and increase access to healthy food and opportunities for physical activity

Through this strategy, the Foundation focuses on reducing the number of Boston children who are either overweight or obese from today’s 44% to 35% in 2015, and to measure over time a number of important benchmarks, such as greater availability of fresh foods and increased physical activity for children. The Foundation also seeks to strengthen the level of state public health expenditures from the current $527 million to $625 million by 2015.

- The Healthy People/Healthy Economy Coalition was launched by the Foundation and NEHI at a press conference at the State House in November of 2010, with the goal of making Massachusetts the preeminent state in America for health and wellness. The Coalition was created in response to the epidemic of preventable chronic disease that threatens to crowd out investments in all of the other areas.

- The Healthy People/Healthy Economy Coalition released its First Annual Report Card, which grades 14 different health indicators in four areas: physical activity; access to healthy foods; investments in health and wellness; and citizen education and engagement.

- Another coalition convened by the Foundation filed legislation on Beacon Hill to remove the favored tax status for sugar-sweetened beverages and candy, require physical activity in schools and encourage healthy food businesses in underserved areas.

- Through its Understanding Boston series, the Foundation also held several forums on health, including Soda, Snacks and the Obesity Epidemic and Active Bodies, Active Minds: The Need for Physical Activity in School.

- The Foundation supports NEHI’s research and work on the Healthy People/Healthy Economy Coalition with a grant of $375,000 over three years. Multi-year investments were also made to organizations that focus on providing young people with physical activities. They included $400,000 to Playworks, a national organization that is providing physical activities to 32 schools throughout Greater Boston, in the process accelerating learning and health for hundreds of children; and $300,000 to Sportsmen’s Tennis & Enrichment Center, which is providing physical activity to students from many Boston schools. Grants also supported organizations providing healthy food to Boston’s neighborhoods, including $270,000 over three years to Bowdoin Street Health Center for its Farmers Market.
Goal: Greater Boston neighborhoods and communities are vibrant, safe and affordable

Objective: Increase job growth, economic competitiveness and equity in Greater Boston

Strategy: Invest in strategies that create, retain and attract workers and jobs in high-growth sectors, in inner-city neighborhoods and in the region as a whole

By 2013, the Foundation wants to increase the number of municipalities participating in the state’s Group Insurance Commission (GIC) health insurance plan or gaining authority over their own health plan design, generating $50 million to $100 million in savings statewide. By 2015, the Foundation seeks to increase community college degrees in key industries by 5% and increase sales and employment in inner-city business districts.

• This year, the Foundation published, with the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, a report titled Municipal Health Plans: Gilded Benefits from a Bygone Era, which compared health insurance plans of cities and towns with state GIC and other plans, finding that health plans for city and town employees are far more expensive than others, resulting in cuts in most other municipal services.

• Through this and numerous other reports—and by contributing to the dialogue and mobilizing a coalition of business and civic leaders in support of health care reform—the Foundation played a key role in the passage of groundbreaking health care reform legislation—signed into law by Governor Deval Patrick on July 12th, 2011. The legislation gives cities and towns the potential for at least $100 million in savings and is expected to save jobs and keep public facilities open.

• With $1 million in total funding over five years, the Boston Foundation has been a major partner in Achieving the Dream, a national community college reform initiative.

• The Foundation also commissioned research to support efforts to bring greater alignment between community colleges and employer needs in Massachusetts and released it at a major forum at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

• Grants included $150,000 over two years to the Massachusetts Biotechnology Education Foundation to strengthen that field and $180,000 over three years to Interise to help small business owners.

• This year’s John LaWare Leadership Forum, which convenes business and civic leaders to discuss challenges and opportunities for our region, focused on the economy and jobs in Massachusetts, with special sessions on the cost of doing business in the Commonwealth and the right economic mix for the state’s future.
Objective: Increase the livability, affordability and safety of Boston neighborhoods

Strategy: Reduce the incidence of violence in Boston neighborhoods, especially among youth

The Boston Foundation’s efforts in this area focus on its StreetSafe Boston initiative, which reaches out to proven-risk youth through a Streetworker program and then works to connect them to the mainstream through education, jobs, housing and other services. StreetSafe’s goals are to decrease gang-involved shootings by 60% in the five neighborhoods where most shootings take place and decrease youth homicides by 30% in those neighborhoods.

- Working closely with the Boston Police Department’s gang unit, the Massachusetts Parole Board, the Department of Youth Services and the courts, this year StreetSafe identified 20 of the city’s most violent gangs and the 300 impact players within these gangs, who drive most of the violence.

- StreetSafe is becoming a national, even international, model for violence prevention. After the riots by youth in Greater Britain, Prime Minister David Cameron looked to American cities, specifically Boston, for solutions—resulting in an Associated Press story about StreetSafe that was shown by media outlets around the world.

- In August of 2011, StreetSafe, in partnership with the Boston Police Department, hosted a Boston by Night tour at the request of representatives of the U.S. Department of Justice, Labor and Housing and Urban Development, along with officials from the City of Boston and Boston Public Health Commission.

- The Boston Foundation also has invested $500,000 over four years in Boston Medical Center for its Violence Intervention Program, a collaboration with the Boston Public Health Commission, to provide services to victims of violence and their families. The Martha Eliot Health Center also received $60,000 for its Jamaica Plain Violence Intervention and Prevention Collaborative, which increases intervention services for victims of violence and their families.

My Summer in the City 2011

The Boston Foundation announced $710,000 in funding this summer for youth programs. Some $250,000 went to My Summer in the City, which kept parks and playgrounds open after hours with organized activities for youth. Grants to 12 community organizations working with low-income Boston youth offered high quality, extended-hour programs in some 15 neighborhoods and parks, with indoor and outdoor activities ranging from neighborhood block parties to organized sports activities to programs focused on healthy lifestyles.
Objective: Increase the livability, affordability and safety of Boston neighborhoods

Strategy: Increase neighborhood stability and the production and preservation of affordable housing for vulnerable populations

The Foundation seeks to increase the number of units of housing by 16,800, which represents 30 percent of the shortage of units projected for 2020. In addition, the Foundation seeks to preserve 85 percent of “expiring use” affordable units and 50 percent of “40 year” affordable housing mortgages that were established in the 1960s.

• The Boston Foundation has made an investment of $1 million over five years to the Fairmount/Indigo Line CDC Collaborative, a group of neighborhood based organizations that are creating dynamic, diverse neighborhood centers in Dorchester, Mattapan and Hyde Park near stations on the Fairmount/Indigo Line, which is being transformed into a rapid-transit like service to link these neighborhoods to the rest of the city.

• This year’s Greater Boston Housing Report Card focused on the strong link between housing and the economic crisis while warning that Massachusetts is not immune from the economic stresses affecting other parts of the country.

• The Commonwealth Housing Task Force, convened by the Boston Foundation, also continues to monitor the growth of Smart Growth Housing districts, which are supported by state funding that the Task Force helped to secure.

• Major initiatives to strengthen low-income families include the Family Independence Initiative, which received a grant of $450,000 over three years, and the Metropolitan Boston Housing Partnership, which was awarded $500,000 over five years for the Family Self Sufficiency program.

• The Foundation has invested $700,000 over three years in Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC) including $25,000 to develop comprehensive community plans for three neighborhoods under the Resilient Communities/Resilient Families initiative.

• Other grants included $300,000 over three years to the Massachusetts Association of Community Development Corporations and $110,000 over two years to the Massachusetts Union of Public Housing Tenants.

• In April of 2011, the Boston Foundation co-hosted a Healthy Communities Conference in partnership with the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston focused on the intersections between health and community development. Experts from across Boston participated in panels reflecting both perspectives.
Objective: Enhance civic and cultural vibrancy in Greater Boston

Strategy: Strengthen and celebrate the region’s diverse audiences, artists and nonprofit cultural organizations

The Boston Foundation is dedicated to increasing participation in the arts among Greater Boston’s residents and elevating the region’s rich and diverse cultures while strengthening the entire arts and cultural sector.

• Through a grant of $600,000 over six years to Edvestors, the Foundation is a major partner in the Arts Expansion Initiative, which seeks to increase the number of Boston Public Schools students receiving once-weekly arts instruction from the 2009 baseline of 67% to 100%.

• In its second year of partnership with the YMCA, the Boston Foundation’s Neighborhood Arts Summer Initiative engaged youth and families from Egleston Square and Chinatown, using arts and culture to build community.

• Some $7 million has been approved in the Massachusetts capital budget for the Cultural Facilities Fund, which the Boston Foundation played a major role in creating by publishing research about the key role cultural facilities play in the state’s economy and by creating a coalition to push for its passage.

• The Foundation has made significant investments in institutions that have regional reach and impact, including the Boston Ballet, the Institute of Contemporary Art, Zoo New England, Boston’s Children Chorus, OrigiNations and the Theater Offensive, all of which are making deliberate efforts to reach under-represented audiences.

• Large-scale cultural events that broadly engage residents in the creative life of our community have been important to the Foundation, including grants to First Night and Boston Landmarks Orchestra for its efforts to reach Greater Boston audiences with free classical music.

Random Acts of Culture

On June 2, 2011, the Boston Foundation held an event to welcome F. Javier Torres as our new Senior Program Officer for Culture and Arts. The guest speaker for the festivities was Dennis Scholl, Vice President for Arts at the Miami-based Knight Foundation. Dennis is known for a program called “Random Acts of Culture,” made up of artistic “flash mobs” in public places throughout America with spontaneous performances of classical music, dance, theater or opera. The Boston Foundation surprised him with its own “flash mob” upon his arrival in the lobby of the Foundation’s office building in the Back Bay. Participating groups included Rainbow Tribe, Inc., Status Quo Dance Group, Berklee Singers, Genki Spark drummers and singers from the Handel and Haydn Society.
Applying for a Grant

A Focus on People and on Place

The Boston Foundation is two years into implementing its strategic framework—Thriving People/Vibrant Places. This strategic framework has focused the Foundation’s grantmaking, research, convening, public policy work and special initiatives on eight core strategies that seek to have a profound impact on major issues facing Greater Boston’s people and places.

All of the resources for our grantmaking in Greater Boston are from the Permanent Fund for Boston, which has been built over the years through gifts and bequests from Boston area donors who care deeply about our community.

The Foundation invests the majority of its resources in proven or promising organizations and initiatives that are significantly aligned with the two major goals and five objectives below:

Goal: Greater Boston residents are successful and thriving

Objectives:
- Improve outcomes for Boston’s residents across the education pipeline
- Increase the health and wellness of Greater Boston residents

Goal: Greater Boston communities are vibrant, safe and affordable

Objectives:
- Increase job growth and economic equity and competitiveness in Greater Boston
- Increase the livability, affordability and safety of Boston neighborhoods
- Enhance civic and cultural vibrancy in Greater Boston

Types of Support

There are four principal types of support available from the Foundation’s discretionary grant making resources:

Competitive Grants: At any point in time, there are 150 to 175 organizations in the Foundation’s competitive grants portfolio. Most of these partners are doing work that is highly aligned with the approaches and end-state results to which the Foundation seeks to contribute across its eight core areas of work. A limited sub-set of those partners are doing important work outside of those areas. Over the past two years, the Foundation has made a shift toward making larger, multi-year, operating support grants to core partners, as well as program and project grants where appropriate. Applying for a competitive grant starts with a simple on-line Letter of Inquiry (LOI). Please speak with a member of the Foundation’s Program staff before submitting an LOI.

Vision Fund: These are grants of up to $7,500, awarded to organizations for smaller capacity-building projects, including board development, strategic planning, exploring or piloting a new program area, planning for collaboration with other organizations. Priority is given to organizations that are not likely to be competitive for larger grants. Applying for a Vision Fund grant starts with an on-line application accessed from our website.

Initiative Grants: A significant amount of the Foundation’s grant funds are distributed through special initiatives. Often, these funds are not open to broad application—for example StreetSafe Boston, Success Boston, CHAMPS and others. At times—as with SkillWorks—there are periodic Requests for Proposals (RFPs) for organizations that are defined as eligible by the specific initiative. Information about RFPs is available on the Foundation’s website.

Becoming a Donor

Customizing Charitable Solutions One Donor at a Time

It all begins with you. Your vision joined with our experience means that together we can design a philanthropic plan that meets your goals. We will marry your aspirations and passion for giving with our deep understanding of the important issues facing our communities to achieve results that matter.

Whether you are just beginning your philanthropic journey or possess a high level of clarity and sophistication, we can strategically tailor solutions to serve you and create positive change for the causes you care about.

Expertise and Service That Can Maximize Your Giving

We have an entire Philanthropic and Donor Services Department to assist you. Our knowledgeable staff serves as a liaison with charities close to home and far away—lending expertise on a wide range of issues and helping you measure the impact of your giving. We will invite you to forums on important issues, introduce you to other donors and include your entire family.

Meeting Your Goals Through a Donor Advised Fund

The Boston Foundation has been a Donor Advised Fund expert for more than 30 years and has hundreds of these funds—ranging in size from $10,000 to $40 million. A Donor Advised Fund operates much like a private foundation, without the administrative or payout burdens. You make unlimited grants anywhere in the U.S. or abroad when it is most convenient for you—and receive the maximum charitable tax deduction every time you add to your fund. Only one simple form is required to establish a fund.

Incorporating Charitable Giving Into Your Estate Planning

We also offer many ways to incorporate charitable giving into your estate planning—and will help you decide which type of gift is right for you. You can make a planned gift by will or trust; gifts of retirement plan assets and life insurance; and gifts that pay you income and preserve assets for your heirs. Your gift can benefit any type of named fund or combination of funds (Donor Advised, Designated, Field of Interest or the Permanent Fund for Boston).

Having an Impact Through the Civic Leadership Fund

Many Boston Foundation donors and others make an annual gift to the Civic Leadership Fund, which fuels innovation by helping the Foundation identify and address critical challenges facing our community. Through gifts to this fund, the Foundation publishes cutting-edge research, holds compelling public forums and creates action plans for positive change, making real progress in education reform, health and wellness, smart-growth housing and our cultural infrastructure.

For more information about becoming a donor or making a planned or legacy gift to the Boston Foundation, call the Development Office at 617-338-1700 or visit the Foundation’s website at www.tbf.org and choose Giving.

Choosing the Contribution That’s Right for You

We accept gifts of cash, stocks and bonds, complex assets, including closely held or restricted stock, gifts of real estate and LLC or partnership interests. Whether you make a charitable gift during your lifetime or through your estate, we can accommodate your giving plans.
Help Us Build the Permanent Fund for Boston

In 1917, a Boston businessman named James Longley left a large bequest to the Permanent Fund for Boston. It was so large that it made Greater Boston’s community foundation the first in the country to make grants.

Today, he is helping Boston Public Schools graduate Elisio Depina fulfill his dream of a college education through an initiative called Success Boston, which receives major support through the Foundation’s Permanent Fund for Boston.

To mark our 100th Anniversary in 2015, the Boston Foundation is reaching out to our donors and others to establish named funds within the Permanent Fund for Boston and thereby strengthen this critical fund, which supports all of our grantmaking in Greater Boston and gives us the flexible resources needed to respond to the most urgent needs of the day.

We Invite You to Join Us

The Boston Foundation has many ways to incorporate planned and legacy giving into your estate plan to benefit the Permanent Fund for Boston. We can help you decide which type of gift is right for you. You can create a named fund through a flexible, unrestricted gift or direct your gift to an issue or population or cause you care about deeply.

Investing in the Future

Make a permanent gift to Boston’s primary endowment with confidence that it will always be used to meet the most urgent needs facing Greater Boston.

For more information about helping us build the Permanent Fund for Boston, call the Development Office at 617-338-1700 or visit the Foundation’s website at www.tbf.org and choose Giving.

Ted and Grace Fey have included a bequest to the Permanent Fund for Boston in their estate planning.
The Boston Foundation has a mandate both to fulfill its role as Greater Boston’s community foundation today—by maximizing dollars available for making grants—and to ensure that the charitable dollars entrusted to the Foundation are available to continue this work tomorrow and in perpetuity. Robust development efforts and a well-diversified investment strategy enable the Foundation to meet these objectives.

Fund for the 21st Century
The Boston Foundation offers three separate investment pools within the Fund for the 21st Century. These three pools allow donors to select the option that best matches the time horizon of their charitable giving plans. Donors may also customize their asset allocation by investing among all three pools. The Balanced Plus Pool asset mix is expected to produce the highest long-term investment return.

Accordingly, the Boston Foundation invests its endowment assets in the Balanced Plus Pool.

Financial Oversight
The Foundation’s Investment Committee establishes investment policy and monitors the individual investment managers and their performance, and the Board sets each year’s spending rate. The Investment Committee is assisted by an independent investment consulting firm.

The assets of the Balanced Plus Pool include not only traditional stock and bond investments, but participation in private equity, venture capital, real assets (real estate, timber and energy) and flexible capital strategies. Diversification among multiple asset classes helps to reduce the volatility of the Foundation’s endowment and should moderate market risk.

The Spending Policy

By using a spending policy, the Foundation helps to ensure that the charitable funds will be protected for the future, while continuing to have the most impact today. The 2011 spending rate was 6% for its permanently restricted discretionary funds. For Fiscal Year 2012, the Board approved a spending rate of 6.4%. The Foundation uses a smoothing mechanism that helps balance the current endowment market value and the previous level of spending. Spending is equal to 70% of spending from the previous year, adjusted for inflation, plus 30% of the 6% spending rate applied to the current market value.

Audited Financial Statements

The Foundation’s financial statements are prepared under policies and procedures overseen by the Foundation’s independent Audit Committee and the Board of Directors. The statements are audited by KPMG LLP. A summary of the audited financial statements is shown here. The audited statements are available on our web site at www.tbf.org.

The financial statements include all funds held by the Foundation, including the Fund for the 21st Century.
Since the early part of the 20th century, hundreds of individuals, families and businesses have strengthened the Greater Boston community immeasurably by establishing and contributing to funds at the Boston Foundation. The Foundation works closely with donors to strengthen their giving—and helps an ever expanding number of individuals and families take advantage of planned and legacy giving opportunities to benefit the future of our community. The following pages list all of the funds that are held by the Foundation and the many donors who have contributed to them. Each fund has its own name, purpose and history, but all of them gain strength from being managed and invested together—and all of them contribute to strengthening Greater Boston’s community foundation for today and the future.

Donors to the Civic Leadership Fund

This critical fund helps to fuel the Boston Foundation’s highly effective formula for civic leadership, which includes: publishing cutting edge research; holding major forums and convenings; conducting strategic and proactive grantmaking; forming task forces and coalitions; using communications and the media—and engaging in deep public policy work.

A number of areas of community life have benefited from this work, including health and wellness, public education, smart growth housing, cultural facilities funding and CORI reform. We thank all of this year’s generous donors.

Discretionary Funds

Many donors have established funds that are totally unrestricted or have quite broad purposes, giving the Boston Foundation flexibility in the way the income is used. These are the primary funds for which Greater Boston area nonprofit organizations may apply. They provide support to programs that address a broad range of community needs.

The following is a list of all Discretionary Funds established at the Boston Foundation since 1915.

THE PERMANENT FUND FOR BOSTON

The Permanent Fund for Boston is the most flexible fund the Boston Foundation holds, giving our staff and board the crucial resources they need to respond to the most critical issues facing contemporary Greater Boston. The Foundation is dedicated to building this important fund that supports crucial activities in education, health, housing, workforce development, arts and culture—and all areas that have an impact on Greater Boston. The following includes donors who have made gifts totaling more than $5,000 to this fund, with the year of their first contribution noted in parentheses.

Dedicated to the Memory of Myra Kraft

This 2011 annual report is dedicated to the memory of Myra Kraft, beloved and valued member of the Boston Foundation’s Board of Directors.

Her wisdom and spirit helped to guide the Boston Foundation during her lifetime and will inspire all of its work going forward.
In 1930, he made his first charitable contribution, writing a check for $10, which was one-third of his weekly salary...
