THIS YEAR, THE CHARACTER OF THE PEOPLE OF GREATER BOSTON REVEALED ITSELF TO THE WORLD. We saw it in the response of the trained medical personnel who rushed to the site of the Boston Marathon bombings without thinking about their own safety. We saw it in the families who reached out to comfort their neighbors and the children who mounted fundraising drives for the victims. We saw it every time a bus sign alternated between its destination and the words “Boston Strong.”

While Boston’s response to the trauma in April surprised some, it was not surprising to the people who live and work here, especially those of us involved in the nonprofit sector. At the Boston Foundation, we are afforded the opportunity to see the very best of our community at work regularly. The stories in this annual report, for instance, are about people whose lives have been transformed by everyday heroes. An alienated boy gains a sense of pride when he’s asked by a coach to help organize games on a playground. A girl who’s been struggling with her numbers meets an inspiring teacher and math becomes her favorite subject. A woman raised in the school of hard knocks graduates with honors from a community college with the help of a woman who supports her every step of the way.

The Boston Foundation has two sweeping goals for Greater Boston. One is to see the people of our community be successful and thrive. The other is to help build vibrant, safe and affordable communities. This is the first in a series of annual reports that will focus on the impact of the nonprofits and special initiatives we fund—and the policy work we do—in order to meet these goals. The series leads up to our 100th anniversary in 2015, which will culminate in a major report to the community about the work we have been doing for 100 years, as well as the impact of the key strategies we have been investing in over the last five years. You will find lots of statistics in these pages, reflecting impact, but you will also read about human beings who were generous enough to let us tell their stories, which is another way to convey impact.

The year 2013 was a remarkable one at the Boston Foundation. We saw record gifts from donors who increased their own philanthropy while strengthening their community foundation. Not surprisingly, our donors were also extremely generous in their response to the One Fund drive for the victims of the Marathon bombings. In total, the Foundation gave close to $1 million to that fund—a testament to the commitment the Foundation and our donors have to Boston. And donors gave in record numbers to the Civic Leadership Fund to support our public policy work, which is designed to change the conditions that affect everyone in our city and our state.

We said goodbye to highly-valued members of our Board of Directors, including Atsuko Fish, who launched a fund for the victims of the earthquake and tsunami in Japan while she was here, Kevin Phelan, who guided our fundraising efforts, and Bennie Wiley, who oversaw our grant making. And we welcomed Paul Gannon, Ronald O’Hanley, Paul Lee and Dr. Myechia Minter-Jordan to the Board. Already, they are making unique contributions to our work.

We hope our community’s mettle is never tested again as it was this year, but we are very proud that other parts of America and the rest of the world got to see just how compassionate and strong the people of Greater Boston really are.

About the Boston Foundation

THE BOSTON FOUNDATION IS GREATER BOSTON’S COMMUNITY FOUNDATION—one of the first and today one of the largest and most innovative community foundations in the nation. With more than 1,000 separate funds established by hundreds of philanthropists, the Foundation has close to $900 million in assets.

The Boston Foundation’s vision is of a Greater Boston where the people are successful and thriving and the neighborhoods are vibrant, safe and affordable. Our approach involves supporting programs that directly help people through grant making—and improving the systems that affect everyone in our city and region through civic leadership and public policy change. In close partnership with our donors and other partners, we have five priorities: EDUCATION, HEALTH, JOBS, NEIGHBORHOODS and ARTS AND CULTURE.

Helping Donors Achieve High-Impact Philanthropy

Boston Foundation donors measure their philanthropy by impact created, not just dollars given. Through hundreds of Donor Advised Funds, our donors make grants in Greater Boston, across the United States and around the world. Hundreds of our donors also have invested in the future of Greater Boston through gifts or bequests to the Permanent Fund for Boston—the city’s only permanent endowment fund. Boston Foundation donors and other philanthropists also work with The Philanthropic Initiative (TPI), an operating unit of the Boston Foundation, to maximize their giving through specialized consulting services.

Providing Major Funding to Nonprofit Organizations

Through grant making and special initiatives in Greater Boston, we support nonprofits directly and work to strengthen these important organizations and their leaders through a range of activities designed to enhance the long-term vitality of the Massachusetts nonprofit sector. Large, multi-year grants go to high-impact nonprofit organizations and programs and smaller annual grants go to promising ideas and projects.

Promoting Systemic Change Through Civic Leadership

With crucial support from the Civic Leadership Fund at the Boston Foundation, the Foundation is a major civic leader for Greater Boston and our region. We conduct this work through a formula that has helped to shape public policy in K-12 education, community colleges, health and wellness, municipal health care reform, cultural facilities funding and other areas through: Cutting Edge Research; Major Forums and Convenings; Strategic, Proactive Grant Making; Task Forces and Coalitions; Communications and Media; and In-Depth Public Policy Work.

The Boston Indicators Project: Providing Data and Analysis for More Than a Decade

When People Thrive: Stories of Impact
All of the Boston Foundation’s grant making and public policy work is guided by two visions for Greater Boston’s future: RESIDENTS ARE SUCCESSFUL AND THRIVING and COMMUNITIES ARE VIBRANT, SAFE AND AFFORDABLE.

This is the first of three annual reports that will explore the impact of our grant making and public policy work in meeting these goals—culminating in our 2015 annual report to the community on the occasion of the Boston Foundation’s 100th Anniversary.

Here you will meet children and adults who are succeeding despite the odds they’ve had to overcome and the obstacles they’ve encountered along the way—with the help of outstanding schools, special initiatives and nonprofit organizations that are making a profound difference in their lives.

Supported by the Permanent Fund for Boston and the Civic Leadership Fund

Behind these stories are other stories: those of the hundreds of generous and civic-minded people and companies who have contributed to the Permanent Fund for Boston since 1915 and to the Civic Leadership Fund at the Boston Foundation over the last decade. Without their generosity and commitment, our work would not be possible and the remarkable people profiled in these pages would not have benefited from the innovative work we describe here.
IMPACT: Making Play Count for Kids | Playworks

BOSTON IS HOME TO SOME OF THE BEST MEDICAL CARE IN THE WORLD, but our city’s residents—including our children—are falling victim to the same preventable chronic diseases that are plaguing those living in other parts of America. With an increase in Type 2 Diabetes in young people that has been directly linked to a virtual epidemic of childhood obesity, physicians and health officials are deeply concerned that two in every five children attending Boston’s schools are overweight.

A major factor contributing to the problem is a lack of structured opportunities for physical activity. Few would argue that exercise is good for children and can make inroads in reducing obesity, but a growing body of evidence is also making the link between physical fitness and improved academic performance. This is especially true for low-income children. The American Academy of Pediatrics has endorsed school recess time and physical education as essential for health and learning, yet only 30 percent of Boston public schools offer physical education.

Enter Playworks. The Boston Foundation was “there at the beginning” in helping to bring this unique organization to the city in 2006. Playworks is the only nonprofit in the country that provides trained, full-time coaches to low-income schools in major urban areas. The program works through a powerful system of play that is making a daily difference where it is most needed. With energy, imagination and many high fives, the coaches build games and physical activity into a positive school environment, offering opportunities for healthy play not only during recess, but throughout the entire school day—from the minute the first school bus arrives in the morning to the moment the last one pulls away in the afternoon.

THE FIRST TIME THE PLAYWORKS COACH AT THE DEVER-MCCORMACK K-8 SCHOOL, SINDDY DEJESUS, MET ISMAEL AMEZQUITA, he was repeatedly kicking a wall in the hall outside a classroom, which he had just exited without permission. “I could tell he was really frustrated,” she says, “so I asked his teacher if he could help me on the playground for a while.” The intervention worked. Ismael did such a great job helping Coach Sinddy that she asked him if he wanted to be a Junior Coach for a day—as long as he also accepted the consequences of leaving his classroom. “I wanted him to understand that if you do a good job at something, there are also positive consequences,” she explains.

Junior Coaches, who proudly wear their purple Playworks T-shirts, help to supervise sports, games and other recess activities. Playworks has been ensconced at the Dever-McCormack for four years now—a struggling Turnaround School in Dorchester, which is one of only four dual-language schools in Massachusetts, with classes taught in both Spanish and English.

Ismael turned out to be such a good helper that Coach Sinddy made him a permanent Junior Coach. “The next thing I know, Ismael is teaching kids to play Rock, Paper, Scissors,” she says, referring to a game Playworks uses to resolve conflicts, “and leading kickball and other sports.” Ismael, who excels at football and basketball, is very proud of being a Junior Coach. “It’s pretty important,” he says. “I have to make sure kids don’t argue and I teach them how to play sports and how to show loyalty to their teams.” Beyond getting leadership experience and more exercise, Ismael is benefiting in other ways from Playworks. Both his teacher and his mother report that his positive behavior on the playground is seeping into every other part of his daily life.
BOSTON HAS ONE OF THE BEST URBAN SCHOOL SYSTEMS IN AMERICA, but an unacceptable achievement gap persists between low-income Black and Latino students and their white peers. This year, a national report showed that 83 percent of Massachusetts’s charter schools produced better results in math and reading than comparable traditional schools in the six academic years ending in 2011. The report, by the Center for Research and Education Outcomes at Stanford University, also showed that Boston charter schools basically doubled the number of students who could read and do math at a level above the state average, while traditional schools maintained the status quo. A co-author of the report said that Boston’s charters have “a realistic shot at completely closing the achievement gap.”

By supporting the replication of high-performing charter schools, through grant making and policy leadership, the Boston Foundation is committed to closing the achievement gap. It has offered major support to the NewSchools Venture Fund to replicate effective charter schools—including Brooke Charter Schools, which are ranked #1 in the state—and has made hundreds of thousands in grants to other charter schools. And the Race to the Top Coalition, a diverse group of business, community, civic and education leaders convened by the Foundation, played a critical role in passing education reform legislation in 2009, which included raising the cap on charter schools in struggling districts and creating other innovations. Since then, many more of these high-performing schools have opened—but a number of towns and cities, including Boston, have hit “the cap” on new charters—and the Coalition is working to lift that cap in the lowest performing districts.

RESPECT FOR HER TEACHERS. A LOVE OF LEARNING. PUSHING HERSELF TO GET THE MOST OUT OF EVERY CLASS. These are the things Sherly Napeau mentions when asked about Brooke Mattapan Charter School. “I love it here,” she exclaims. “They make you believe you can go to college someday, and I know I will.”

“Sherly has such a positive attitude,” says her 6th grade math teacher, Danielle Blair. “When she came here last year, she was getting low scores on her math quizzes. By the end of the year she was doing much better, but we knew she needed more time, so we decided to have her repeat 6th grade. That probably wouldn’t have happened at another school.” Sherly was remarkably mature about the decision. “She said, ‘Ms. Blair, I was a little disappointed, but I’m excited to be working with you again.’ Now math is her favorite subject.” And Brooke Mattapan placed first in the state in 6th grade math on the 2013 MCAS test.

The first Brooke Charter School, located in Roslindale, was founded in 2001 and has quietly grown into one of the highest performing schools in Massachusetts, offering a school day that is longer than traditional schools and focusing heavily on supporting its teachers. Most of the students are Black or Latino and most qualify for a free or reduced lunch. The classrooms at Brooke Mattapan—there is also a Brooke East Boston—are named after colleges. Indeed, the back of Sherly’s navy blue T-shirt, a uniform for Brooke students, reads: “Spelman College” and “Morehouse College,” a constant reminder of the goal for every Brooke scholar. There is no question that Sherly will attend college. In fact, inspired by the example of her mother, an immigrant from Haiti who became a nurse, she plans to become a pediatrician.
GAYLE SWEENEY’S ENTIRE LIFE HAS BEEN ABOUT OVERCOMING ADVERSITY.

She grew up in Charlestown and went to the Boston Public Schools during the tumultuous desegregation years. “We called ourselves ‘the lost generation’ because of all of the violence,” she says. She dropped out in the 11th grade because she couldn’t stand the daily stress of attending school anymore. She went on to work in a variety of jobs. Waitressing. Checking out customers in a grocery store. Even an eight-year stint on the Big Dig, mixing cement while filling the quota for female employees. When she enrolled at Bunker Hill Community College, she already had battled breast cancer and depression. While attending college, she would see her mother and brother lose their own lives to illness. She also faced numerous financial hurdles.

“Single Stop’s name says it all,” she says. “They help students with everything—from food stamps to financial advice to filing your taxes.”

Single Stop is primarily known for helping community college students access financial benefits, but in Gayle’s case, they also helped her to avoid a lifetime of debt. A Single Stop financial advisor discouraged her from finalizing a student loan to a private college that would have meant a quarter of a million dollars in lifetime payments.

Gayle is proud to have graduated with honors from Bunker Hill Community College in four years and now is going to Bridgewater State University. Her new hurdle is figuring out how to pay for the transportation to get there from Boston and the books she needs to pursue her dream of becoming a speech and language pathologist for the elderly. “Money. That’s always the obstacle for students like me,” she says. Anyone who meets Gayle, however, will come away convinced that eventually she will overcome anything that stands in the way of achieving her dream.
A MAJOR PATH TO SUCCESS FOR AMERICA’S ADULTS RUNS THROUGH COMMUNITY COLLEGES, but the cost of attending school prevents too many students from graduating. More than half drop out because of finances. Single Stop, a national organization that is piloting its approach in Massachusetts at Bunker Hill Community College with support from the Boston Foundation, connects low-income students to existing resources and services that have the power to help them stay in school and achieve a degree.

“The hurdles facing these students are the things that most middle-class people take for granted,” says Kathleen O’Neill, Single Stop’s Director at Bunker Hill and someone the students have come to rely on for support. “Not only housing and child care and health insurance. But dentistry. Utility bills. Eye glasses. Transportation. These are the things that make it possible—or impossible—for students to stay in school. Take any one of them away, and a student’s plans and hopes for finishing college can just fall apart,” she explains. Single Stop’s office is easily accessible to students, who stop by to see Kathleen, but also to pick up the free bread that Panera offers the college, since even basic nutrition can be a challenge for some students.

In the short term, Single Stop augments financial aid for students by providing access to crucial benefits and services that supplement their income. In the long term, by making it possible for students to graduate, this nonprofit’s ingenious yet simple approach to solving the biggest problem most students have will yield higher lifetime earnings and greater economic mobility for thousands of community college students. Dr. Pam Eddinger, who recently became President of Bunker Hill Community College, has nothing but praise for the program. “I don’t know what many of our students would do without it,” she says.
THIS YEAR THE BOSTON FOUNDATION PUBLISHED A REPORT THAT HAD SOME VERY GOOD NEWS ABOUT THE COLLEGE COMPLETION RATES OF BOSTON PUBLIC SCHOOLS GRADUATES. Prepared by the Center for Labor Market Studies at Northeastern University, it showed that over the last decade, BPS graduates are enrolling in, persisting in and completing college at higher rates than in the past. The most encouraging news for a college completion initiative called Success Boston was that those students participating in the initiative who are most at risk of not completing college, Blacks and Latinos, are showing stunning college persistence gains of 17 to 22 percentage points when compared to their peers who are not participating.

Success Boston was created in response to a 2008 report, also from Northeastern, which found that despite high college enrollment rates, completion rates were abysmal: only 35 percent of BPS graduates who enrolled in college in the first seven years after graduation completed a degree by the end of that period. Mayor Thomas M. Menino responded swiftly to the news by collaborating with the Boston Foundation, the Boston Public Schools, the Boston Private Industry Council and University of Massachusetts Boston to launch Success Boston, which has the ambitious goal of doubling six-year completion rates for the class of 2011. The initiative focuses on low-income, first-generation students of color who are at greatest risk of not graduating—and works with high schools and colleges to offer students a sweeping series of supports, including financial aid, intensive personal coaching and a network of mutual support.

TWO GRADUATES OF THE BOSTON PUBLIC SCHOOLS ENTERED THEIR SOPHOMORE YEAR AT UMASS BOSTON THIS YEAR—having made their way through Freshman year with the help of Success Boston. Tucker Gaye (right) was just five years old when his father and two sisters fled a horrific civil war in Liberia to move to the U.S. Anamol Gurung’s parents were forced to leave him behind in Nepal to be cared for by a series of aunts as they made their way here to build a better life. He joined them when he was 14.

Even though their families have struggled, both of these students look back at their high school experiences with pride, but the prospect of college life was daunting. “It’s the transition,” explains Tucker. “There is so much you have to understand—from the courses to campus life to financial aid. I don’t know what I would have done without Tahina.” He is referring to a Success Boston coach from Freedom House, Tahina Barlatier, who works as part of a pioneering embedded program at UMass Boston, and coaches both Tucker and Anamol. “She helps us with everything,” explains Anamol. “When I was struggling in a course and my grades were going down, she helped me find a tutor. You can ask her about anything.” No doubt Tucker and Anamol will continue to rely on Success Boston as they advance on their paths to their ambitious goals. Tucker is trying to decide between a career in politics, communications or international relations. Anamol knows that he wants to go into medicine and is most intrigued by the idea of becoming a neurosurgeon.
LIVES TOUCHED: Jorge Montero and Natalie Camacho

JORGE MONTERO AND NATALIE CAMACHO WELCOMED MASS IN MOTION’S HEALTHY MARKET INITIATIVE when it arrived at their grocery store in the form of representatives from Healthy Dorchester. The large inner-city Boston neighborhood of Dorchester receives fully half of the funding the Boston Foundation gives to Mass in Motion because of the Foundation’s special focus on promoting health there. The Healthy Market survey was created by Bowdoin Street Health Center and administered by Uphams Corner Health Center and Healthy Dorchester, a Mass in Motion initiative dedicated to improving health in that neighborhood.

“After we took the survey, they came back and made suggestions about how we could carry fat-free cheese and foods that are good for people with diabetes,” says Natalie. “Our biggest challenge is refrigeration,” adds Jorge, pointing to a small refrigerator unit packed to the gills and protected by strips of heavy plastic. Every morning, Jorge drives a truck down to Chelsea where he can find the freshest vegetables and fruits in the city, returning with boxes of perishable bananas, papaya, pineapples, lettuce and onions.

Natalie’s father named the grocery store “Navarette” for his hometown in the Dominican Republic. After running it for 23 years, he handed management over to Natalie and Jorge, who are engaged. Both grew up in families where nutritious food was served. “You don’t see many obese people in the Dominican Republic,” says Natalie. “There isn’t much fast food. I just heard the Burger King down the street is starting to deliver. People won’t even have to walk there to get dinner!” Jorge and Natalie have plans to renovate the Navarette to make better use of the space and allow for more refrigeration. Together they represent a new generation of grocers who are embracing their responsibility as the primary purveyors of food for a diverse neighborhood in need of healthy options.
THE HEALTHY PEOPLE/HEALTHY ECONOMY COALITION, LED BY THE BOSTON FOUNDATION AND NEHI, ADDRESSES ONE OF THE MOST CRITICAL ISSUES WE FACE TODAY: spiking rates of preventable chronic disease despite the state’s massive—and growing—spending on health care. The Coalition releases a Report Card every year to assess how much progress the Commonwealth is making toward better health, with the ultimate goal of making Massachusetts the national leader in health and wellness. The focus of this year’s Report Card was on the health disparities between low-income and higher-income individuals and families, with low-income residents suffering from dangerously high rates of preventable diseases, such as diabetes. In Massachusetts, individuals earning less than $40,000 per year may be twice as likely to have diabetes as people making more than $75,000 annually. And the gap continues to widen, creating almost insurmountable hurdles for many people who are trying to thrive.

The Boston Foundation was “there at the beginning” for Mass in Motion, a statewide initiative that is building capacity at the local level to promote active living and healthy eating. The Foundation continues to be a major supporter of this highly effective program, which is a model for other states around the country. One of Mass in Motion’s special efforts, the Healthy Market Initiative, seeks to make nutritious food available to community residents, especially those living in low-income neighborhoods, often described as “food deserts.” It does so by conducting surveys of small grocery stores and markets to determine whether they are carrying healthy foods and then informing them about how to improve their offerings.

When Donors Solve: Stories of Impact
A MARRIED COUPLE searches for a way to start to give something back to a world that has been kind and generous to them. They turn to the needs of the state’s homeless children and families.

A BOSTON-AREA ARTIST wants to find a way for some of her work to be donated to nonprofit organizations that just don’t have the resources to purchase art for their offices and facilities. She thinks other artists might be interested too.

A MAJOR CORPORATION that is a worldwide developer and manufacturer of medical devices decides to focus its philanthropy on those who are usually overlooked by the American system of health care.

These are just a few of the stories of donors who either have funds at the Boston Foundation or have been helped in their work by The Philanthropic Initiative. All of them have approached their philanthropy as more than just giving dollars to worthy causes—but as problems they saw in the world and wanted to solve.

Michael and Barbara Eisenson

MICHAEL AND BARBARA EISENSON BEGAN THEIR JOURNEY AS PHILANTHROPISTS 24 YEARS AGO. “We were still pretty young,” explains Michael, “and we were developing a sense that we would be financially secure and could begin doing something that was helpful to other people.” They were also mindful that their financial resources were limited and so they wanted to focus on a need that was unambiguous and local.

“There is no ambiguity about the needs of homeless children and their families,” says Michael. And so, in 1996, Michael became one of the founders of Horizons for Homeless Children, a Massachusetts nonprofit, which today is recognized as a national leader in the early education of homeless children.

“When we began working on Horizons,” adds Barbara, “we were new parents and we wondered how people who didn’t have the education or a partner or the resources we had could possibly function.” Barbara and eventually all of their four children volunteered at Horizons.

“We both come from modest backgrounds,” says Michael, “and we appreciate how many breaks we’ve had along the way and how many institutions and people have been helpful.” Michael was a first-generation college student with very supportive parents and Barbara’s father left a subsistence farm in South Carolina to enlist in the Navy, eventually becoming an Admiral. “That’s what can happen with education,” says Barbara. “It’s the best kind of story about the United States.”

Michael, who is Managing Director and CEO of Charlesbank Capital Partners, serves on the boards of Horizons for Homeless Children, Williams College, The Berklee College of Music, where he started a fund in honor of his father to support country music, which his father loved, and the Boston Foundation. Barbara is on the boards of the New England Aquarium and the U.S. Fund for UNICEF. “When we were growing up, aquariums were meant to be entertainment,” she says, “but now they’re committed to conservation and research and education.” Her work with UNICEF is inspired by the needs and rights of children worldwide.

Another nonprofit they support is the Planned Parenthood League because of their strong commitment to women’s reproductive rights and to the issue of teen pregnancy, which Michael points out is one of the primary reasons students fail to complete high school.

They conduct their philanthropy through the Eisenson Family Fund, a Donor Advised Fund at the Boston Foundation. Of his work on the Foundation’s Board, Michael says: “The staff will tell you that I’m always asking about impact. Even when it’s difficult to measure, the question is always important.”

He believes the Boston Foundation is in a unique position to identify and work on the issues that stand in the way of Boston being as good a city as it can be for the full range of its citizens. “Today those issues include education reform, the problem of childhood obesity, and the connection between postsecondary education, job readiness and the community college system,” he says. “These are fundamental issues the Foundation is perhaps uniquely well positioned to address, both by identifying them and by developing solutions and catalyzing those solutions.”
THERE’S ONLY ONE WAY TO LEAD A LIFE, Fay M. Chandler believes (with a nod to theologian Paul Tillich), and that’s to “have the courage to be the way I am.”

At 91, the artist lives independently in the decommissioned Brighton firehouse she bought and renovated in the 1980s, her dainty living room couch cheek-by-jowl against a workbench overflowing with paint cans and brushes. Some of her giant canvases dominate the walls, and every horizontal surface in the former engine bay is adorned with mementos, photographs (including one of her with Barack Obama in 2008), honors and various objets d’art.

After establishing her studio at the firehouse—and finding herself with too many canvases that had no home—she rounded up seven like-minded friends and, in 1995, created the Art Connection. It is a nonprofit organization that accepts works of art from artists to give to community service organizations and other nonprofits in Greater Boston.

Each year, the Art Connection places 400-500 works with social service agencies, public schools and other institutions that serve the public but have no funds to buy art. Each organization forms a selection panel—usually consisting of staff and clients—to view slides of the Art Connection’s available works and to choose up to 25 donated artworks to own. When the art is installed, the organization holds an “opening” for the artists and the clients.

“The whole point is for people who might not ever have seen an original piece of art to have that experience,” says Susan Collings, the nonprofit’s executive director. “It’s a very successful model and it really has become a win-win for the artists who donate,” she says. “From the get-go, it’s been Fay’s vision.”

Now Fay is using one of her Donor Advised Funds at the Boston Foundation (named for her beloved aunt and namesake, Fay Slover) to help replicate the Art Connection model in eight sites up and down the East Coast, including New York, Washington, D.C. and Philadelphia. She also set up Donor Advised Funds for each of her four children so that they can make their own gifts to causes they care about.

“She’s incredibly philanthropic to many of the arts organizations all around Boston,” says Susan Collings. “She’s done a lot—that is just her very nature, but it’s an undertold story.” For example, Fay is a longtime sponsor of the Boston Landmarks Orchestra, which offers free concerts on the Esplanade every summer. “It seemed really important to me to make it possible to introduce art and music to people who hadn’t had the opportunity to see or hear it,” Fay says. “Because until or unless it’s introduced to you, you can be quite blind to your senses. I know, because I was that way myself until I was almost 40.”

She also gives to human-services and health-care organizations, noting that “It’s natural to want to make people happy.” And while her life and career have been full, she is not content to sit back and bask in the many accolades that have come her way. “I’m 91,” she marvels, “and I’m constantly amazed at how much there still is to learn.”
The Art Connection
by the Numbers

The Art Connection “expands public access to visual art by placing the work of donor artists and collectors on the walls of community service organizations.... Within these healing environments, the original works of art provide welcome opportunities for reflection, inspiration, comfort and hope.”

At Boston Health Care for the Homeless, the patient self-management model has expanded beyond its initial focus on diabetes. “We use an electronic medical record to track the work we do with patients,” Sharon explains. “The system won’t let you move forward with a patient without addressing his or her goals for treatment, disease management and how they will monitor their own care.” The results are impressive: the number of women getting screened for cervical and breast cancers has more than doubled in five years; the number of overweight people who are counseled about weight management almost doubled in two years; and the organization is within sight of its goals for other conditions.

Jean Lance, a Boston Scientific Senior Vice President who serves as President of the Board of the Boston Scientific Foundation, says the goal of the National Health Disparities Initiative was to develop a proactive strategy that would have impact long after the program ended. “It’s tremendously rewarding to effect change and then see that change become institutionalized,” she says, noting that all the health centers that received multiyear grants have incorporated the patient self-management practices into their work.

The Philanthropic Initiative (TPI), a Boston Foundation operating unit, helped Boston Scientific set up its foundation and design and manage the National Health Disparities Initiative. In addition, “TPI has provided guidance that helped us understand best practices and move forward with innovations in grant making and philanthropy,” Ms. Lance says. “People who work at Boston Scientific have a very strong commitment to health and to helping people. We want to be sure we’re true to the mission of the Foundation and that we’re forward-looking in our philanthropy.”

“TPI has provided guidance that helped us understand best practices and move forward with innovations in grant making and philanthropy,” says Jean Lance.
National Health Disparities Initiative by the Numbers

This 7-year grants program focused on improving health outcomes for disenfranchised populations in California, Minnesota and Massachusetts. The Boston Scientific Foundation’s mission is “to increase educational opportunities and foster improved health and welfare for economically disadvantaged people.”

Helping You Achieve High Impact Philanthropy

Becoming a Donor

If you would like to measure your philanthropy by impact created, not just dollars given, the Boston Foundation is the ideal place for you. Boston Foundation donors expect a return on their investment—here measured in human good achieved.

SOLVING THE PROBLEMS YOU CARE ABOUT. The Boston Foundation is a complete source of advice about grant making for individuals, families, foundations and corporations at any stage. If you want to give confidently and have the greatest impact on the causes you care about most, whether in Greater Boston or around the globe, we can help you bring it all together.

OFFERING DONOR ADVISED FUNDS AND PRIVATE FOUNDATION ALTERNATIVES. The Boston Foundation has been a Donor Advised Fund expert for more than 30 years. With hundreds of these funds and decades of experience working with donors, we can help you meet your charitable goals. Establishing a fund at the Boston Foundation is ideal for those who want the benefits of a private foundation, but none of the administrative, legal, tax and regulatory burdens required of a private foundation.

MAXIMIZING YOUR GIVING WITH TPI. The Philanthropic Initiative (TPI), now an operating unit of the Boston Foundation, is an internationally recognized provider of philanthropic consulting. A pioneer in the field of strategic philanthropic consulting for nearly 25 years, TPI advises individuals, families, foundations and corporations in the U.S. and around the globe, helping clients maximize the impact of their philanthropy by defining priorities and strategies, implementing programs and evaluating success. Building from the values and interests of each client, TPI delivers innovative, customized solutions.

HELPING YOU PLAN A LASTING LEGACY WITH THE PERMANENT FUND FOR BOSTON. As Greater Boston’s only community endowment fund, the Permanent Fund for Boston does today what it will do 100 years from now: It provides the resources the Foundation needs to respond nimbly to the most pressing issues of the day. We can help you plan a lasting legacy by creating a Named Fund or Field of Interest Fund as part of the Permanent Fund for Boston—and help you plan the best way to incorporate legacy giving into your estate planning, including gifts by will or trust, gifts of retirement plan assets and life insurance and gifts that pay you income and preserve assets for your heirs.

Supporting Systemic Change Through the Civic Leadership Fund

By working with the Boston Foundation, you become part of a dynamic community of change makers. Through policy leadership, the Boston Foundation has helped to leverage hundreds of millions of dollars in federal and state funds, pass new legislation in K-12 education, restructure our community college system, provide crucial state funds for cultural facilities and much more. This work is supported by the Civic Leadership Fund at the Boston Foundation, which is contributed to by hundreds of donors every year.

For more information about becoming a donor or making a planned or legacy gift to the Boston Foundation, call the Director of Development at 617-338-1218 or visit www.tbf.org/solve.
A Focus on People and on Place

Applying for a Grant

The Boston Foundation has a strategic framework, called Thriving People/Vibrant Places, which guides our grant making, research, convening, public policy work and special initiatives.

All of the resources for our grant making in Greater Boston come from the Permanent Fund for Boston, which has been built over the years through gifts and bequests from Boston area donors who care deeply about our community.

The Foundation invests the majority of its resources in proven or promising organizations and initiatives that seek to deepen their impact or bring their work to scale and are significantly aligned with the two major goals and five objectives below:

Goals:
- Greater Boston residents are successful and thriving
- Greater Boston communities are vibrant, safe and affordable

Objectives:
- Improve outcomes for Boston’s residents across the education pipeline
- Increase the health and wellness of Greater Boston residents
- Increase job growth and economic equity and competitiveness in Greater Boston
- Increase the livability, affordability and safety of Boston neighborhoods
- Enhance civic and cultural vibrancy in Greater Boston

Types of Support

There are three principal types of support available from the Foundation’s discretionary grant-making resources:

COMPETITIVE GRANTS: At any point in time, there are 150 to 175 organizations in the Foundation’s competitive grants portfolio. Most of these partners are doing work that is highly aligned with the approaches and end-state results to which the Foundation seeks to contribute. A limited subset of those partners are doing important work outside of those areas. Over the past four years, the Foundation has made a shift toward making larger, multi-year, operating support grants to core partners, as well as program and project grants where appropriate.

Applying for a competitive grant starts with a simple online Letter of Inquiry (LOI). Please speak with a member of the Foundation’s Program staff before submitting an LOI.

VISION FUND: These are grants of up to $7,500 for projects up to $15,000, awarded to organizations for capacity-building projects including board development, strategic planning, exploring or piloting a new program area, or planning for collaboration with other organizations. Priority is given to organizations that are not likely to be eligible for competitive grants. Applying for a Vision Fund grant starts with an online application accessed from our website.

INITIATIVE GRANTS: A significant amount of the Foundation’s grant funds are distributed through special initiatives. Often, these funds are not open to broad application—for example StreetSafe Boston, Success Boston and others. At times, as with SkillWorks, there are periodic Requests for Proposals (RFPs) for organizations that are defined as eligible by the specific initiative. Information about such RFPs is available on the Foundation’s website.

We invite you to visit our website for detailed information about how to reach us and how apply for a grant. Please go to www.tbf.org and choose “Investing in Nonprofits.”
The Boston Foundation has a mandate both to fulfill its role as Greater Boston’s community foundation today—by maximizing dollars available for making grants—and to ensure that the charitable dollars entrusted to the Foundation are available to continue this work tomorrow and in perpetuity. Robust development efforts and a well-diversified investment strategy enable the Foundation to meet these objectives.

Fund for the 21st Century
The Boston Foundation offers three separate investment pools within the Fund for the 21st Century. These three pools allow donors to select the option that best matches the time horizon of their charitable giving plans. Donors may also customize their asset allocation by investing among all three pools. The Balanced Plus Pool asset mix is expected to produce the highest long-term investment return. Accordingly, the Boston Foundation invests its endowment assets in the Balanced Plus Pool.

Financial Oversight
The Foundation’s Investment Committee establishes investment policy and monitors the individual investment managers and their performance, and the Board sets each year’s spending rate. The Investment Committee is assisted by an independent investment consulting firm.

The assets of the Balanced Plus Pool include not only traditional stock and bond investments, but participation in private equity, venture capital, real assets (real estate, timber and energy) and flexible capital strategies. Diversification among multiple asset classes helps to reduce the volatility of the Foundation’s endowment and should moderate market risk.

The Spending Policy
By using a spending policy, the Foundation helps to ensure that the charitable funds will be protected for the future, while continuing to have the most impact today. The 2013 spending rate was 6.4% for its permanently restricted discretionary funds. For Fiscal Year 2014, the Board again approved a spending rate of 6.4% for its discretionary endowment. The Foundation uses a smoothing mechanism that helps balance the current endowment market value and the previous level of spending. Spending is equal to 70% of spending from the previous year, adjusted for inflation, plus 30% of the 6.4% spending rate applied to the current market value. The approved spending policy rate for designated endowment funds is 5.0% for Fiscal Year 2014.

The Philanthropic Initiative
The Philanthropic Initiative, Inc. (TPI) is a significant business unit of the Foundation. TPI designs, carries out and evaluates philanthropic programs for individual donors, families, foundations and corporations. The experience and reputation of TPI significantly expands the range of philanthropic services the Foundation offers. During Fiscal Year 2013, the operations of TPI added $1.8 million of service fee income to the operations of the Foundation.

Financial Analysis
Total assets of the Boston Foundation increased from $804 million to $896 million at June 30, 2013. For the year net investment returns were 10.6%. During this period, the Foundation received $130 million of contributions and made $105 million of grants. Expenditures for program support and operating expenses totaled $20.2 million thus explaining the change in total assets. The investment environment was positive during the year and the Foundation continued its investment in the communities that it serves.

Audited Financial Statements
The Foundation’s financial statements are prepared under policies and procedures overseen by the Foundation’s independent Audit Committee and the Board of Directors. The statements are audited by KPMG LLP. A summary of the audited financial statements is shown on page 34. The audited statements and Form 990 are available on our website at www.tbf.org.

Boston Foundation Funds

FOR CLOSE TO 100 YEARS, MORE THAN 1,000 INDIVIDUALS, FAMILIES AND BUSINESSES have strengthened the Greater Boston community immeasurably by establishing funds at the Boston Foundation and thousands more have contributed to funds held by the Foundation. The Boston Foundation helps donors achieve high-impact philanthropy and take advantage of planned and legacy giving opportunities to benefit the future of our community. The following pages list all of the funds that are held by the Foundation and the many donors who have contributed to them. Each fund has its own name, purpose and history, but all of them gain strength from being managed and invested together—and all of them contribute to strengthening Greater Boston’s community foundation for today and the future.

Donors to the Civic Leadership Fund

This critical fund helps to fuel the Boston Foundation’s highly effective formula for civic leadership, which includes: publishing cutting edge research; holding major forums and convenings; conducting strategic and proactive grant making; forming task forces and coalitions; using communications and the media—and engaging in deep public policy work. A number of areas of community life have benefited from this work, including health and wellness, public education, smart growth housing, cultural facilities funding, municipal health reform and CORI reform. We thank all of this year’s generous donors.

The Permanent Fund for Boston

The Permanent Fund for Boston is the most flexible fund the Boston Foundation holds, giving our staff and board the crucial resources they need to respond to the most critical issues facing contemporary Greater Boston. The Foundation is dedicated to building this important fund that supports work in education, health, housing, workforce development, arts and culture—and all areas that have an impact on Greater Boston. The following includes donors who have made gifts totaling more than $5,000 to this fund, with the year of their first contribution noted in parentheses.

About Designated Funds and Special Initiative Funds

In addition to the above funds, the Boston Foundation also holds a number of Designated Funds, which have been established by donors to support one or more of their favorite nonprofit organizations or programs. These funds provide crucial annual support to some of Boston’s most important nonprofit organizations, such as the Boston Ballet, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Children’s Museum, the Museum of Science and the New England Aquarium.

The Boston Foundation also holds a number of funds that support special initiatives—designed to respond to some of the most pressing challenges facing our community in innovative ways. These include initiatives focused on college completion, job training, health and wellness and other important areas of community life.

If you would like a listing of Designated Funds or Special Initiative Funds, please call the Donor Services Manager at 617-338-1700.
